U.S. Sit-In Staged At UN

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—A majority of the United Nations Security Council membership, with U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg in the forefront, staged a sit-in of nearly 6½ hours Thursday night in an effort to have the council president summon an urgent session on Rhodesia.

The 10 nations demanding a meeting of the 15-nation council gave up before midnight. A delegate said they had received "an oral indication" Ambassador Moosa Keta of Mali, council president for April, was continuing his consultations and could not call a meeting before today.

NO CHOICE

Britain had requested an urgent session to obtain authority from the United Nations to use force if necessary to stop ships from delivering oil to the rebel regime in Rhodesia. They wanted the council to meet at 4 p.m. Thursday.

But with the council president still refusing to set a time for the meeting, the waiting delegates had no choice but to go home and hope for word from Keta today.

Goldberg, who became spokesman for the unprecedented sit-in told reporters in early evening the 10 members "are preparing to meet in the council this evening and are holding themselves ready for this purpose."

EIGHT PLEAD

He said the 10 are the United States, Britain, The Netherlands, New Zealand, Japan, China, Argentina, Uruguay, France and Jordan.

The other council members are the Soviet Union, Mali, Uganda, Nigeria and Bulgaria. Eight of the 10 — excluding France and Jordan — joined in asking Secretary-General U Thant to convey their views formally and urgently to the council president, Ambassador Moosa Keta of Mali.

CONVEYED VIEWS

Thant immediately sent their views to Keta by a special representative. Members of the group seeking the council meeting started going into the council chamber at 5 p.m. and remained there through the evening.

Asked if their procedure was unusual, Goldberg replied: "It is a most unusual and unprecedented procedure."

As the delegates waited, Britain put in a formal resolution requesting authority to use force if necessary to prevent ships from arriving in Portuguese Mozambique with oil destined for Rhodesia.

RUSSIAN URGINGS

Diplomatic sources said the delay in calling the meeting came about because Keta was seeking approval of the entire 36-nation African group before convening the session, although only Mali, Nigeria and Uganda are African members of the council.

Other diplomatic sources reported that the Soviet Union was

Ancient Christian Story Relived This Weekend

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

As Canadians make their annual exodus in search of spring, the ancient Christian story of death in agony and rebirth in joy will be commemorated across the nation this weekend.

Easter, 1966, takes on a particular significance for Christians and other people of goodwill. Jews will be continuing their observation of the Passover in remembrance of their forebears' freedom from slavery. Their eight-day celebration began Monday.

Christians of both Eastern and Western churches will commemorate Christ's death on the cross on Calvary and His resurrection on the third day.

With Eastern churches marking the date by the Julian calendar and Western churches by the Gregorian calendar, their Easter observances coincide every fifth year.

A grim prediction that 40 persons will die on the highways during the 78-hour holiday was made Thursday by the Canadian Highway Safety Council. Its figures are calculated from 6 p.m. local time Thursday to midnight Sunday. Last year 39 persons died on the roads during the last five years the average Easter highway death toll has been 38.

Centres across Canada reported transportation systems setting themselves for a massive rush with travel bookings heavy. Indications are that it will be an otherwise quiet weekend with few special activities. Construction begins Easter Sunday on the Christian pavilion for Expo 67 in Montreal.

Prizes Grow As Artists Storm Fence

By JERRY BOULTREE

It seems Victoria's artists just can't lose.

To borrow the words of one of the city's fence painters: "With spring, and sun and someone else's fence to muck about on — what more could a person ask for?"

CURIOUS, TOO

Thursday saw more artists out at the boardings surrounding the new provincial museum and archives construction site.

Artists and viewers and the just plain curious turned out at Thunderbird Park.

And there was an air of implicit caper to the whole thing.

GALLERY

And the net result was a mammoth bill of encouragement to the artists as merchants joined The Daily Colonist in offering awards.

Here are the prizes so far: The Colonist has offered $100 to the winner of a competition to be judged by Works Minister Chant, Mayor Toome, Prof. Tony Emery of University of Victoria, and Colin Graham, director of the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria.

Second prize will be $25; third prize $10.

Mr. Graham has offered to show the best of the paintings at the gallery following judging on May 21.

450 PANELS

Peace's Drug Store, Simcoe and Menzies, has offered $100 to a winning artist — with a rider attached.

Shots Kill Four In Indian Riots

CALCUTTA, India (Reuters)—Police opened fire twice and killed four persons Thursday during violent demonstrations in which crowds attacked a police headquarters with home-made bombs.

Sixteen persons were taken to hospitals with bullet wounds and 30 policemen were injured by stone-throwing crowds.

Highways Minister Phil Gaglardi laughingly adds few brush strokes to caricature of himself painted on pan-

Riots Step Up

Viet Nam Corps Secedes

SAIGON (UPI)—Anti-government and anti-American mobs went on a rampage in Saigon Friday for the fifth straight day amid reports from Da Nang that the senior officers of the powerful Vietnamese Army First Corps had withdrawn their loyalty from Premier Nguyen Cao Ky's government.

Viet Cong forces meanwhile attacked and apparently overran a 20-man government outpost only 25 miles south of Saigon in the second major encounter with Viet Cong force in the suburbs of the capital within 24 hours.

The senior officers at Da Nang issued a proclamation stating that they had lost confidence in Ky's government. The action raised the spectre of a civil war between opposing South Vietnamese forces over Ky's continuing rule. Some 4,000 Vietnamese marines, rushed to the area earlier this week by Ky, were still at the Da Nang air base.

STILL Pondering

The proclamation was signed by most of the senior officers of the First Corps command except for Gen. Nguyen Van Chuan, their commander. He was reported still pondering whether to go along with the action that amounted to a virtual revolt against Ky's leadership.

Two Vietnamese air force Skyraiders buzzed Chuan's headquarters, apparently in a show of force by Ky's loyal airmen. Troops at the compound said the planes were apolloing for a fight and that the pilots were trying to draw fire.

NO SHOOTING

But no shooting was reported immediately in the strategic major port city in the northeast area of the country.

In Saigon, government paratroopers trying to quell the riots Thursday night fired tear gas grenades into Saigon's main Buddhist shrine.

U.S. Army infantrymen Thursday caught 150 Viet Cong by surprise and killed 24 of them in a battle 30 miles northwest of the capital.

MAN FOUND

An American reported kidnapped during the height of the violence Thursday night has been located, U.S. officials reported. The American, Larry Dewitt, 25, Oakdale, N.Y., was severely beaten by the mob.

As the violence continued, a gang of 30 to 40 youths stormed a jeep in the vicinity of the main Buddhist pagoda in Saigon, pulled a man believed to be an American out of the

Space Engines

Success, Then Failure!

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP)—The United States attempted Thursday night to achieve the first double ignition of high-powered hydrogen engines in space—and after apparent success announced that something seemed to have gone wrong.

An Atlas-Centaur rocket blasted away from Cape Kennedy right on schedule at 8 p.m. EST and the Centaur upper stage ignited successfully a first time to boost itself into a 100-mile-high orbit.

FIRE AGAIN

After the hydrogen-propelled Centaur coasted through space for 25 minutes, the U.S. Space Agency announced that radio data indicated the stage had fired a second time, had shut down and that a dummy model of a project survivor soft-lander moonship had been hurled toward an imaginary moon 234,000 miles in space.

Court Peace Shaky

VANCOUVER (CP)—Peace has been declared in Vancouver's magistrates' courts but there were reports the war is not yet over.

The city's new senior magistrate, James Bartman, says the dispute between city prosecutor Stewart McMoran and eight of the 10 magistrates is officially over.

But there have been reports that the magistrates are sticking by their earlier decision not to allow Mr. McMoran to appear before them despite Magistrate Bartman's statements to the contrary.

The prosecutor declined to comment Thursday on his future plans.

Disastrous Rains Hit South America

By FRANCIS R. KENT

RIO DE JANEIRO (LAT)—

Since shortly after the first of the year, uncommonly heavy rains have pounded a vast area of eastern South America, causing uncounted deaths and uncalculated damage.

Brazil, Argentina, Paraguay and Uruguay all have felt the effects and it will be months before the toll can even be roughly estimated.

Sketchy reports from the devastated area indicate that hundreds are dead and thousands homeless. Property damage is deep into the millions of dollars and losses in crops may not be known for months, although the figure is expected to be in the hundreds of millions of dollars.

Rainfall alone has accounted for much of the loss in both lives and property. In northern Argentina, the swirling waters were reported to be six feet deep in the streets of some cities.

Just northwest of Buenos Aires, an estimated 200,000 persons were driven from their homes in the towns of San Nicolas, Pergamino and Villa Hermosa. Reports from the area said the flooding was the worst of the century.

At Gambling Club

LONDON (UPI)—Six men appeared in court Thursday accused of triggering a Wild West-style gunfight in a London gambling club that left one man dead and littered the scene with injured.

The battle took place at 3 a.m. March 8 at Mr. Smith's Club and the neighboring street in the district of Catford. Most of the six men who appeared in court charged with making an affray were injured in it. One still had his right arm in a sling.

Prosecutor Oliver Nugent said 15 to 20 men with at least two guns, possibly more, were in the fight between "outwardly friendly" gangs.

"The picture which arises from the evidence is rather like what you may have seen in Western films — with two people facing each other and people edging away to get out of the line of fire," Nugent said.

The fight moved into the street, where one injured man was dragged into a car after being carried out of the club.

Another was taken to a garden in an obvious attempt to hide him. Two of his friends hid in another garden, said Nugent. Another injured man was taken to a hospital after amateurish attempts to sew up his wounds.

"The general line of defense is that they were attacked by somebody but they did not know whom," Nugent said.

Hong Kong Rioters Protest Price Hike

HONG KONG (Reuters)—

Police opened fire on rioters overturning cars in Hong Kong's Kowloon district early today after a third successive night of disturbances.

At least two rioters were wounded.

Thousands of demonstrators took to the streets, stoning vehicles and starting fires in protest against a plan to increase the cross-harbor ferry fare and against rising prices in general.

One group of demonstrators made a bonfire in the street from chairs, tables and other articles looted from nearby stores.

At 12:30 a.m. the authorities imposed a curfew until 6 a.m. and patrolling British troops and riot police arrested curfew-breakers.

vehicle and beat and kicked him.

The violence was the worst since the current political crisis erupted March 11 against the military government of Premier Ky.

BULLED FROM BIKE

The grave incidents gave rise to fears that serious political repercussions may be in the offing. Attacks on a Buddhist holy place in 1963 led to rioting which contributed to the overthrow and assassination of President Ngo Dinh Diem.

Dewitt was pulled off his bike Thursday by the mob which set him afire. They backed the young American against a wall, stone and beating him.

American military police and other American security officials in the vicinity received reports that the youths carried Dewitt to a blue van, threw him inside and carried him away.

BATTERED, SAFE

The American embassy immediately filed a report to Washington that an American was believed to have been kidnapped.

Early Friday, Dewitt was located, battered but safe. A Vietnamese policeman in plain clothes apparently managed to get him away from the mob and lead him to safety in a nearby house.

Dewitt stayed in the house until early Friday, not realizing that a city-wide search was underway for him.

GROWING FEARS

The fifth straight day of anti-government and anti-American riots gave rise to growing fears that Communist agitators were playing an increasingly important role in the demonstrations.

That started out as a principally Buddhist demand for a civilian government.

There was speculation that the Buddhist monks had lost control of the mobs.

Buddhist leaders earlier had said the Viet Cong might be inspiring the violence, but the monks were rallied by the beat of tin drums and gongs from the pagoda.

Ascent looking monks on bicycles led some of the mobs into the streets.

JEOP BURNED

The rioters overturned and burned a U.S. army jeep, smashed the windows of an American diplomatic limousine.

Shattered anti-U.S. slogans on walls and waved banners read: "End the war."

Buddhist opposition to the military government was northern cities of Hue and Da Nang. Anti-government thugs gave crash courses in rioting to students who called for mass demonstrations.

among several delegations urging a postponement of a meeting here until next week.

The urgent move by Prime Minister Harold Wilson's government was aimed at making UN sanctions compulsory against the breakaway Central African colony.

SECOND TANKER

It came as the Greek tanker Joanna V stood ready in the Portuguese Mozambique port of Beira to unload oil which could be pumped into the 100-mile pipeline to Rhodesia.

A second Greek tanker, the Manuela, steaming southward through the Mozambique channel with British warships following, could reach Beira this afternoon.

In Athens, a Greek government source said Greece is ready to ask the United Nations for clear-cut authorization for Britain to halt any trading with Rhodesia.

DELAY FORCED

Greece was said to feel that the UN resolution of last November approving an international trade embargo against Rhodesia failed to say specifically how Britain might proceed.

Britain originally requested that the Security Council meeting be held at 4 p.m. but arrangements could not be worked out in time, forcing a delay.

Delegates of Britain and other Western members of the council took their places in the council chamber for the meeting without a formal announcement it would be held.

NO AFRICANS

None of the African delegates, including Kenya, turned up.

A United States spokesman said the Western delegates were present because it was their understanding that as Britain, a permanent member, had asked for an urgent meeting, it would take place.

Britain prepared a resolution for the council under chapter 7 of the UN charter—that would put teeth into the sanctions program. Right now the worldwide trade ban on Rhodesia recommended by the Security Council Nov. 20 last is not binding on UN members.

Language Teachers Will Meet

More than 200 Pacific Northwest language teachers are expected to attend a two-day meeting here this month.

The event is the 17th annual meeting of the Pacific Northwest Conference on Modern Languages, being held here for the first time April 14 and 15 with the University of Victoria as host.

Dr. Ralph Baldwin, assistant professor of French at the university, said Wednesday that teachers attending the meeting would range from junior high school to university level.

At seminars in the Congress Hotel they will discuss newest methods of teaching foreign languages.

have their work completed by that date.

Thursday, as more artists flocked to the hoardings to reserve space and start on paintings, two helpful youngsters—brothers David Stark, 9, and Stuart, 13,—did a quick count of available panels and came up with the figure 450—half of them with hole, half solid sheets.

Which leaves plenty of room for an awful lot of work before May 21.

But there should be enough talent in the Victoria area to fill the space with ease.

Indonesian Denounces High Living by Officials

JAKARTA (UPI)—A member of the Indonesian parliament Thursday denounced high-ranking government officials for extravagant living, speech-making and exposing young women to corruption.

Dahlan Ranuwihardjo told a student group in Bandung that the high-living by Indonesian leaders was a new form of feudalism.

He particularly criticized the "bombastic uniforms resplendent with glittering stars all over their breasts."

While he did not mention President Sukarno by name, it was obvious the criticism was directed at him. Sukarno often appears at formal occasions with a dazzling star-and-ribbon laden tunic.

Red Band Awaited For Crash Victims

BERLIN (Reuters)—The bodies of two Soviet flyers whose plane crashed into a lake in West Berlin were recovered Thursday night—but had to wait for a Soviet band before being returned to the East. Meanwhile, a Scots regiment played a lament at lakeside.

Battle-Flag Trade Boomed — Briefly

SAIGON (UPI)—Enterprising brave men in the Green Berets of the U.S. Special Forces had a good thing going in the sale of bloodstained Viet Cong battle flags to souvenir-hungry American soldiers in Saigon.

But their swindle has been undone and their "Betsey Ross" has hung up her needle.

The Green Berets, members of the rugged Special Forces troops fighting the Communists in the swamps, jungles and mountains of Viet Nam, were cleaning up with the sale of "Viet Cong battle flags" to U.S. pilots here at $25 per.

The airmen spend most of their war time high above the Viet Cong and have little or no chance to capture an enemy flag. So business was booming for the Green Berets. The pilots had no way of knowing the flags were phony.

The Green Berets had hired a nice old lady in a Saigon back street to sew the flags. Then they stomped the banners in the mud and sprinkled them with chicken blood before selling them to the anxious airmen.

South Vietnamese police arrested the seamstress after finding 30 Viet Cong flags in her possession during a routine check.

H-Bomb Retrieved

FALOMARES BEACH, Spain (AP)—A U.S. H-bomb, missing deep in the Mediterranean for 36 days, was retrieved Thursday at the climax of a multi-million-dollar search operation.

The triumphant U.S. Navy task force that brought it up celebrated by turning on all lights and sailing close to shore. It formed a spectacular back-drop for somberly-clad but rejoicing villagers as they walked in their traditional Holy Thursday procession.

"They have pulled it up, they have pulled it up," cried villagers pouring through the streets.

'In Broad Sense—Adulterous'

Catholic Attacks Insemination Plan

DETROIT (AP)—A Roman Catholic Church official has attacked a University of Michigan research project involving Oxford and Cambridge university artificial insemination, saying it "robs the marital act of one of its essential elements—an act of love."

The project, in which 29 women had been made pregnant by male sperm from up to 2½ years, "would be, in the broad sense, adulterous," said Rev. Kenneth E. Utner, assistant chancellor of the archdiocese of Detroit.

He said the sperm "is the source of bringing an eternal soul into existence. Artificial insemination is basically manufactured love."

Both American and Canadian women were involved in the experiment.

Lawyers, indicated a wide area of legal problems involving legitimacy, adultery and inheritance. There also appeared some question about who could claim such a child as a tax deduction.

Maharishi Energizes Countrymen

Third in a Series by the Colonist's
EILEEN LEAROYD

I have just seen a remarkable sight—remarkable even for India where the incredible is commonplace.

I saw the foreign minister of an independent country put his head in the dust, then walk backwards, retiring from the presence of the head of this ashram, the Maharishi.

He was U Thi Han, foreign minister of Burma.

U Thi Han was in this part of the world with General Ne Win of Burma, and Mr. R. D. Katari, Indian ambassador to Burma for a golf game at Derra Dune. Having heard of the Maharishi, U Thi Han and his wife, and Mrs. Katari, detached themselves from the golf course to come up the Ganges to see him instead.

They had three hours in private with the Maharishi and then I had tea with them in the garden. When they left U Thi Han and his wife knelt on the ground, put their heads to the earth in a most graceful fashion six times, then walked backwards out of sight.

I was spellbound by the grace with which they did all this. And it impressed me again with the personal magnetism of the Maharishi, for Mrs. Katari told me that U Thi Han is a Buddhist. Mrs. Katari is an attractive woman who has lived in many world capitals. Before her husband became Ambassador, he was an admiral in the Royal Indian Navy, retiring as Naval Chief of Staff.

Before I left Canada, I wrote an article (Jan. 20) attempting to say why I was going to India to visit a holy man.

Curious Mental Control

Apart from the lure of travel, there was a curiosity which prompted many to try to fathom the mysteries of the mental control achieved by certain recluses in the Himalayas.

Hundreds of millions of words have been written on this from ancient times to modern days. Much has been false, much has been authenticated, and much has been scoffed at.

Latterly the scoffing has grown less as more has come to be known about psychosomatic disease. There was a time when a pain in the foot meant the foot was treated. Nowadays doctors report there may be nothing wrong with the foot, but the foot has a very real pain, caused by something in the mind. It might be an arrested desire to kick someone — or a sympathetic pain, any number of causes.

According to figures from McGill University, 80 per cent of disease has a psychosomatic origin. Other figures show one person in 10 has been, or will be treated in a psychiatric ward. So we cannot under-rate the mind.

The Maharishi has a towering knowledge of the mind. That he has become more obvious as I see the streams of people who come to learn from him.

I am sure India has as many wandering monks as we have salesmen at home. I've seen hundreds in the ochre robes of the saunyasins, with their begging bowls on the road.

But the Maharishi is not like these. The "little Saints" who came to call in his garden looked sweet and kind, like innocent children. But the Maharishi does not look innocent, he looks wise.

Authority and Dignity

It's hard to describe him because I've never met anyone else with whom I could compare him. But he looks as if he knows all about you, and all about everybody else.

He has an air of tremendous authority. He also has the kind of dignity that would freeze an impertinent question in your throat. He has the deep, dark eyes of his race. He has a gentle sense of humor.

One day an Indian visitor had a terrible coughing fit. He got up to leave the room.

The Maharishi said, "Stay, and cough quietly."

He teaches a system that eliminates tension, activates the deep levels of the mind and travels to a point beyond merely conscious thought. I am accumulating a vast pile of notes.

He says, "The anxious mind constantly flitting back and forth among its problems in a discontented state, exhausts and irritates the nervous system and the body."

"In this way, mental stress produces disease and even organic changes in the body. Weak thought weakens the body."

"If the mind makes the body sick and fills it with tension, then that individual is in fact sub-normal. A nation of sub-normal people get sick, fight and create wars, cannot work with maximum energy."

"It all begins with one person. To 'cure' a nation we must start from a known point, the individual mind."

An Indian brain surgeon, a well-known philanthropist who endows a school in Madras, is now visiting here. He is Dr. Rathnavel Subramiam.

He tried to enlighten me on the sensory nervous system, but the main thing I remember is how he said at the end, "... and this is all we know." He said after 25 years' practice he had observed so many unusual phenomena that he knew there were large gaps in medical data concerning co-ordination between body and mind.

Questions Philosophy

Another reason people come to consult the Maharishi is that while he is a recluse, he sees India's ancient renunciate philosophy as ruinous to the nation.

For thousands of years the Indians have interpreted their scriptures as advocating that one should work without hope of reward in this life for a bigger reward in the next. The premise has been that material things are of no value, and that desires must be eliminated.

"It is impossible to live without desire," says the Maharishi. "Loss of emotion means loss of life. Legitimate desires should be fulfilled, and a man is foolish if he does not care for the results of his labors. A life of renunciation is only for the few, the majority are meant to live a full life enjoying the fruits of the material world and acting with all creativity and energy. Only it should be lived as a normal man, not a sub-normal man."

Briefly, he is trying to raise India from a race of fatalists, passively accepting their lot, to a race of people with direction and energy.

"Man was not born to suffer," he says firmly.

That his words are felt to be of practical value is evidenced by the leaders in various fields who come here.

In the West we do not have the passivity problem, or the renunciate situation, but our mental health figures would show that we have great tension problems.

The Maharishi states the pace in the West is not too fast, "but a calm driver is needed, then he can go ahead with all speed."

"A calm driver, means the mind," he says quietly.

Cabinet Allows Suit By Resort Operator

The cabinet Wednesday gave permission to a Cariboo resort operator to take court action against the provincial government for alleged breach of contract.

The suit was granted to Roy Douglas McKelrick of Bowron Lake Lodge, who claimed that the provincial recreation department offered him $32,500 for his property after an appraiser set the price at $57,500.

The government wanted the property for park use.

The cabinet must issue a fiat before any court action against the Crown can be instituted.

Pesticide Licences Needed After June

Approval of new regulations governing the sale of pesticides and the setting up of an advisory committee on agricultural pesticides and veterinary drugs have been announced by the cabinet.

The new regulations, effective June 30, include licensing of all those who sell pesticides and veterinary drugs. Holders of a class A licence may sell all kinds of pesticides and veterinary drugs, but holders of class B licences may not sell 68 highly poisonous pesticides.

Instruction courses for those who sell pesticides also will be held throughout the province. Those who complete the course will be given a certificate.

The advisory committee will carry out investigations at the request of the government and will recommend changes in legislation to the agriculture department.

G. G. Henderson of the Pharmaceutical Association of B.C. was named chairman of the committee.

Labor Wants School

Construction of a technical school for southern Vancouver Island is a matter of extreme urgency, Victoria Labor Council was told Wednesday.

Land has already been earmarked for the school at the junction of the Trans-Canada Highway and Burnside, said vice-president Jack Driscoll. The department of education is negotiating for its purchase.

The council decided to support the IWA Local 1-118 on the proposal.

In a letter to the council, the IWA said the matter was of extreme urgency. If industrial workers are to receive high wages, they need technical education.

SPCA Requests Ban On Baby-Seal Killing

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals said Thursday it has asked the federal government to ban the killing of young seals.

Manitoba

More Flee Floods

WINNIPEG (CP) — Sandbags skirmished with shallow flooding Thursday in southern Manitoba and more people packed up and left vulnerable towns along the rising Red River.

Evacuation recommended by Manitoba flood control headquarters is going on at the communities of Emerson, St. Jean Baptiste, Morris and Roseport. Red River Valley farmers, whose land was inundated in the big 1950 floods, have also been advised to get out.

Roseport was added to the evacuation list after back-up waters from the Red pushed the Morris River into the village of 300.

EMERSON EVACUATION
This was the situation in the other three towns, which got their evacuation notices earlier:
Emerson, on the Minnesota border 60 miles south of Winnipeg, 200 of 800 residents had left Thursday morning and efforts were being made to speed up departure of those remaining.

St. Jean Baptiste, 20 miles north of Emerson, evacuation of a population of 525 was described as 85 per cent completed.
Morris, six miles north of St. Jean, 55 per cent of a population of 1,400 had left.

Peak flood waters are expected April 14-15 at Emerson and April 16-20 at Morris. In unchanged forecasts the Red's crest at Winnipeg is expected April 18-24.

TORONTO (CP) — Prime Minister Pearson's move to encourage bilingualism in the civil service will increase racial antagonism, Steven Otto, Liberal member of Parliament for York East, said Thursday.

Probe Opened—In Secrecy

By KEN KELLY
OTTAWA (CP) — The Spence inquiry has held its first session in secret and without permitting counsel for persons affected to be present and question witnesses. Mr. Justice Wishart Spence said Thursday persons interested in documents and testimony before him Wednesday were notified after the secret session. They were given copies or parts of the documents.

The procedure was immediately attacked as extraordinary by Opposition Leader Diefenbaker and as "most unusual, startling" by former justice minister Fulton.

Mr. Fulton said Mr. Justice Spence told him on the telephone Wednesday morning about 11 a.m. that the inquiry into the Munsinger sex-and-security affair would begin Monday, April 12.

He said he received a letter confirming this as the opening date about 6 p.m. Wednesday and enclosing a number of documents.

Only after reporters informed him Thursday morning that witnesses were heard Wednesday had he received confirmation from the assistant commission counsel, J. J. Urie, that a secret hearing had already taken place Wednesday.

ASKED POSTPONEMENT
Mr. Fulton said he had sent the commission a letter by then requesting a postponement from the April 12 date given him by Mr. Justice Spence.

"There was a formal opening of the inquiry yesterday and certain documents were tendered," Mr. Justice Spence said in an interview.

"Any evidence taken was in connection with them."

Persons mentioned in the documents were notified and supplied with copies or summaries. They were asked whether they wanted to make representations about them.

"EXTRAORDINARY"
Meanwhile, Mr. Diefenbaker said in an interview the commission adopted "a rather extraordinary procedure in that neither Mr. Fulton nor I were made aware of it (the secret session) and I only found out about it today, being informed by the press."

Mr. Justice Spence was appointed by the Liberal cabinet as a one-man royal commission to inquire into sex-and-security charges levelled by Justice Minister Cardin last month.

The justice minister said that two or more cabinet ministers of the former Diefenbaker government were involved with Mrs. Munsinger, a shapely, 35-year-old German blonde. He described her as having been an espionage agent before coming to Canada in 1955.

BANK INVOLVED
Mr. Cardin said there was a security risk involved and that Mr. Diefenbaker mishandled the case by not referring it to the justice department's law officers for an opinion.

Mr. Justice Spence, asked for comment on Mr. Diefenbaker's statement, said, "I don't make any comment on statements by anyone in political positions."

Then in reply to questions about a secret session, he acknowledged one was held to formally open the inquiry Wednesday.

He said the documents tendered at the secret hearing formed the basis on which the inquiry will proceed.

The evidence given was in connection with them.

RCMP officers reported to have appeared before the inquiry Wednesday formally identified police files, a necessary first step to examining witnesses about their contents.

Justice Minister Cardin said Thursday he is willing to be the first inquiry witness.

Mr. Justice Spence said that

Young Man's Attitude Disturbs Magistrate

The attitude of a young man charged with causing a disturbance at a Douglas Street drive-in restaurant caused concern to Magistrate William Oulter Thursday.

Donald Buckner, 119 Crease, was found guilty of the charge and fined $50 or 14 days in default.

Court was told Wednesday that Saanich police were called to the A and W drive-in, 3335 Douglas, to check a car. Buckner, in an adjoining car, made abusive remarks.

"NOTHING WRONG"
Police asked for his license and he said it was at home. It was during this conversation that profanity flew.

When arrested, Buckner let out a burst of oaths, court was told.

Magistrate Oulter said it was not the incident that disturbed him, but the fact that Buckner didn't appear to feel he had done anything wrong.

Cameron Zinn of Duncan was fined $400 on a charge of impaired driving and $25 for not owning a B.C. driver's license.

He was seen leaving the Mayfair parking lot early April 1 and went through a stop sign on Tolmie Avenue.

He was clocked at 50 to 55 miles an hour on Douglas Street and turned onto the Town and Country parking lot from the wrong lane.

Eugene Brabant, no fixed address, charged with four counts of breaking and entering, was sentenced to 20 months on each count. Sentences are concurrent.

Magistrate Oulter said it was unusual to send someone back to the young offenders' unit, but in Brabant's case, according to his submission, courses at the unit were not available during his previous term.

A man whose life and career were being ruined by alcohol was sentenced to three months in jail on a charge of obstructing a peace officer.

Magistrate Oulter told Dennis James, HMCS Saskatchewan, he had already made a mess of his life through alcohol and now his career, in which he appeared genuinely interested, was ruined.

"The trouble is that you can't stay away from the bottle," he told the accused. "This is the first time you have obstructed a peace officer."

"You have been heading for this a long time," Magistrate Oulter told Gary Stewart, 4209 Douglas, before sentencing him for breaking and entering. "It must have been perfectly obvious to you."

The magistrate said Stewart was using liquor as a crutch.

"You will find standing on two feet is easier than standing on one foot, as you are doing now," he said.

He fined Stewart $250, sentenced him to one day in jail and placed him under a $250 good behavior bond.

Stewart was picked up after a chase by Saanich police and charged with breaking into Ball and Rheault Electronics, 1 West Burnside. He had been held in custody.

"The handwriting is on the wall for you," Magistrate Oulter told Raymond Starkey, 6208 Douglas.

Starkey was charged with theft under $50. The item stolen was a drinking friend's overcoat.

The magistrate warned Starkey he would be in serious trouble, unless he changed his way and "cut out the booze."

Starkey asked for and was given a suspended sentence, saying he wanted to go to Campbell River, get a job and become a useful citizen.

Randolph McDougall, 1005 Gosper Crescent, was remanded until April 15 after pleading guilty to car theft. The car was taken several times from a garage at 1105 Pakington and driven up-island by McDougall and a juvenile companion, court was told. The magistrate ordered a pre-sentence report.

Donald Morris, 2334 Mid-downe, was fined $40 on a careless driving charge in traffic court. He was involved in an accident on Hillside Feb. 26.

House Prorogues

REGINA (CP) — The second session of the 11th Saskatchewan legislature prorogued at 9:35 p.m. Thursday after approving a record budget providing grants to homeowners and reducing provincial income tax.

It was a 16-hour, 64-day session, the second for Premier Ross Thatcher's Liberal government.

Tips You Off

Stan Delaplane

"We are still planning our July-August trip to Europe. Our problem: Should we take a tour? What if we don't like the other people on a tour? Can we go alone?"

At that time of year (and this late date) I'd take the tour. It gets so crowded on the tourist route, you'll spend all your time on your own chancing baggage. Getting sightseeing tours. Restaurant tables, etc. Take the tour and let them worry about getting you to the airports.

Now—to keep from being too regimented. You don't HAVE to take every local sightseeing tour. Go around on your own. I've seen a couple of good tours where you can drop off for a week if you like. Pick up the next week's tour. (That might solve the problem if you get stuck with a group you don't like.)

Best tours to get on to see a lot are the ones that have the big, air-conditioned motor coaches. Usually cheaper, too, because they use good but not expensive, de luxe hotels. Average price will be $1,100 for six weeks.

"Would you suggest a hotel for us in Athens? Our first time..."

The Athens Hilton is the most elegant of all the Hiltons. The old Grand Bretagne is getting a little too antique. That Hilton is great. Watch your step and don't slip on the marble floors.

"Please suggest a beach town in France..."

The Riviera is the stylish place to go. But I can tell you the Normandy coast, though I don't think the swimming is as good. Dances of beach towns. The place I go is Villerville. The place to stay is Chez Marie, a wonderful, small Normandy inn where you eat outdoors under the apple trees. (One star Michelin. There are only two of these on the whole coast.)

"We will be in London and want to go to one typical pub..."

Shepherd's in Shepherd's Market (behind Piccadilly) has good atmosphere and good dinner or lunch upstairs. Or any of the pubs along King's Road in Chelsea. Have the taxi driver pick you up. The door marked "saloon bar" is the one you want. About 5 or 6 in the evening. Or noon to 2 p.m. on Sunday when the earnest pub crawlers are out. Half a pint of bitter is the usual drink. But if this is too warm and flat for your taste, ask for a cold lager. That's like our beer.

"I am flying to meet my husband overseas and taking the baby. Can you tell me about baby foods on planes? Overseas? Disposable diapers? Anything else?"

I've done many an air mile with children. Here's what you do: First tell the airline you have a baby, and you'd like one of the seats where a baby bed clips into the bulkhead. Second, carry baby food except for milk. The airlines are supposed to have canned baby food on board but sometimes don't.

Carry your own disposable diapers. Overseas you'll find our brand baby foods and disposable diapers in all big cities. You have to do some searching. Some countries have food only in drugstores. Disposable diapers get scarce out in the country. So you make your own from drugstore rolls of cotton.

Milk is questionable. But formula dry milk is sold in all drugstores. Mix it with bottled water.

"We hope to travel to some warmer country (Mexico?) with a view to living there on $200 a month. We can find tours but no information on whether we can live on this amount."

So much depends on how you want to live. I don't know. I could do it on that amount. Mexico makes immigration attractive—free entry of household goods, etc. There are a couple of organizations who can advise you on living in cheaper, warmer countries and help you re-settle. But I don't know of any travel agency who does this.

I'd suggest you also look into the south of Portugal. The island of Madeira. Smaller towns in the south of Spain.

"Should we exchange money here for a better buy before going to Europe?"

Sorry, no good buys in European money any more this side of the Iron Curtain. Same rate here and there. I usually buy $10 worth of money for the country where I'm landing so I'll have taxi and tipping money. Airport banks here sell it.

"We arrive in New York in the evening and fly to London the next day. Can you suggest a nearby hotel?"

There are several airport hotels. Very modern but rather cheerless. Just a transient place to rest and sleep. Not cheap—maybe $20 for two. But they are handy. Look around the arrivals building, and you'll find a free phone connecting you with the hotel. You phone, they send a car to get you.

"We have several days to stay in Zurich, Switzerland, and would you suggest hotels, restaurants..."

The Dolder Grand is an elegant, Old World hotel. The Bau-a-dac is very posh, overlooking the lake. (It was the stylish spy hotel. Still the place for the Big Deal businessmen.) Waller Kanne is colorful—the only restaurant I can remember offhand. But in the old town you'll find plenty of good restaurants. Excellent fish here. Try the trout. The Swiss have fine wine.

But—I had several days in Zurich. I'd take the train one hour and stay down in Lucerne. A much more colorful town on the lake. Hotel Schweizerhof. Try the restaurant Zum Wilden Mann. And Dubek if it's still open.

Asthma sufferers in salt mine sanitarium gain relief from air humidity, constant temperature and isolation from atmospheric influences. — (Fednews)

This Salt Mine Combines Culture, Clinic

WIELICZKA, Poland (UPI)—Poland's oldest salt mine is also an asthma sanitarium, an art gallery, a chapel, a museum and the site of an ancient legend.

No helpful pointers direct the tourist to the mine, but thousands have found it in the rolling foothills of the Tatras mountains about 10 miles south of Cracow by sighting the tower and wheel of the plumed behind a cluster of factories and rundown cottages here.

Among the tourists who have visited the mine museum 420 feet below the surface are Boy Scout founder Sir Robert Baden Powell, Czar Alexander I of Russia and Angelo Roncalli of Bergamo who died as Pope John XXIII.

These days, tourists who come to see one museum display—a little train of plush seats with gold tassels that carried Austrian Emperor Franz Joseph and his guests of the Viennese court through the shafts 75 years ago, are likely to be factory workers in open-necked shirts and ill-fitting suits. They travel in dusty buses under Polish government encouragement to know their country better.

The asthma sufferers are sent by their unions and they spend the day 675 feet underground for two weeks, sleeping in a cleft on the surface.

SLEEP UNDERGROUND

Then, for a second two weeks, they sleep underground in a huge grotto completely fitted out as a sanitarium. Biting pure air, with the moisture entirely extracted by the rock salt walls of 85 miles of tunnels, gives them great relief.

Tourists don't go as deeply in the ground as the asthma sufferers or mine workers, who are currently operating at a level 1,055 feet below surface. They wander on a higher level through a two-mile maze of brown galleries and towering grottoes.

CAVERN CHAPEL

In one of the largest caverns is a chapel dedicated to Queen Kinga, legendary founder of the mine.

Kremlin Becomes Tourist Attraction

By K. C. THALER

MOSCOW (UPI)—The once forbidding, darkly secret Kremlin is now Moscow's No. 1 tourist attraction.

Muscovites and foreigners alike are entering it freely at all times. Large crowds of Russian and overseas tourists line up before its historic monuments, from which all but the privileged few were barred during the life of Stalin.

VAST COMPLEX

The Kremlin, described in official guidebooks as the "heart of this gigantic city," is a vast complex within mighty 15th century fortress walls. It houses not only the seat of the Soviet government but also some of Russia's greatest historic and artistic treasures.

Stalin, after moving into the Kremlin in the late 1920s, turned the ancient fortress into an impenetrable compound, guarded by guns and an ingenious system of electric warning devices.

PUBLIC DEPRIVED

By closing the Kremlin Stalin deprived the public of the view of such treasures as its ancient cathedrals with their unique collection of icons and frescoes, or the armory with its priceless collection of the treasures of the times and state jewels, crowns and goblet tapestries.

Nikita Khrushchev, soon after taking power, reversed the Stalin measure. He threw open the gates to the Kremlin to the disbelieving eyes of Muscovites. Now Moscow citizens are milling around in the precincts and spacious courtyard of the Kremlin, seemingly without a thought that only a little over a decade ago this was not only forbidden, but also most dangerous ground.

Penalty Plus Hull —Disaster

From CP, AP, UPI

CHICAGO—If Detroit Red Wings persist in taking penalties against Chicago Black Hawks, they better do it while Bobby Hull is out to lunch.

The Red Wings took only one penalty too many, and as a result had themselves one game down in their Stanley Cup semi-final series against the Hawks, who won the opener 2-1 here Thursday night.

And the man who capitalized on the penalty, scoring Hawks' winner in the first period? Hull, who else?

With the Hawks ahead 1-0 on Kenney Wharram's goal at 10 minutes, Detroit centre Norm Ullman picked up a foolish tripping penalty four minutes later.

ONE SECOND

Ullman had only one second left to serve when Hull cruised in front of the Detroit net and tipped in a perfect pass from Chico Maki.

Wharram scored after centre Brian Mikita put him in the clear. Just before taking a jarring check from wing defenceman Leo Bolvin.

SETS IT UP

Detroit got back in the game at 13:42 of the opening session. Ullman atoning for his earlier penalty by setting up Dean Prentice.

Pierre Pilote, Chicago's all-star rearguard, was in the penalty box when Prentice's 20-footer hit Chicago goalie Glenn Hall on the shoulder and dropped in.

GOALIES SHINE

There was no more scoring in the second and third periods, with Hall and Detroit goalie Roger Crozier performing brilliantly at times.

Hall once reached behind him just in time to catch an Ullman shot heading for the net. Crozier stopped point-blank drives by Hull and Mikita.

Oddly enough the Wings were in high spirits, already thinking about Sunday's second game of the best-of-seven series.

FULL SEVEN?

The consensus in the Detroit dressing room seemed to be that the series would go the full seven games and the Red Wings would reach the final.

"If it goes seven games, I'll be bushed," said Chicago coach Billy Reay, as the Hawks appeared subdued.

Actually, the Hawks are 'way ahead of last year's semi-final, in which they trailed the Wings 2-0 after the first two games, winning the series in seven.

ONE CASUALTY

The only casualty appeared to be Hawk defenceman Doug Jarrett, taken to hospital for examination of a back injury in the second period.

"He went into the boards and seemed to get it across the middle of the back," Reay said. Jarrett collided with Detroit's rookie defenceman Bert Marshall, who also limped off, with a "neaty cut inside his thigh."

COMES BACK

But Marshall, a native of Kamloops, returned in the third period.

There may be one unpleasant connotation so far as the Wings are concerned — Hull came out of the game as fresh as he went in.

"They (Wings) kept waiting for us to put him out and we kept holding him back," said Reay. "He was fresh as a daisy after the game."

Abel looked at Hull this way: "If you bottle him up, and I think we did, he's sure to slacken off," Abel said. "You have to cover him before he starts rolling. Once he starts gaining momentum, he just pushes the puck in front of him and barrels down the middle."

But the huge Chicago crowd — more than 20,000 — saw it only one way.

Hull got the winner.

What Time On Sunday?

Sunday's game between Detroit and Chicago will be telecast over channels 2 and 6, beginning at 12 noon, according to the CBC.

Channel 5 in Seattle insists it will telecast the game in color at 3 p.m. PST. But to be sure, better tune in at noon.

Sonji the Greatest Now After Pocketing $27,500

By MATTHEW T. KENNY

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — Sonji Clay collected $27,500 in cheques and a $50 bill from ex-husband and world heavyweight champ Cassius Clay Thursday.

With a swish of her shapely hips stuck a hands-raised winner's pose to proclaim: "Who's the greatest now? I am, me."

Clay, the Louisville Lip who prefers to be known as Muhammad Ali, wasn't around for the windup of his latest legal spat with the pretty Chicago model and nightclub singer he divorced last Jan. 7. Clay's attorney said he hadn't heard from the champ.

TAX DODGE

Clay, however, may have gained $75,000 in tax savings by forcing Sonji to sign a joint tax return before she was given the cheques.

The money represented $22,500 in attorney's fees growing out of the divorce proceedings. $2,500 representing two alimony payments of $1,250 each which Clay hadn't paid. $1,000 in additional attorney's fees for the current legal feud, and $250 for Sonji's expenses.

This was in one cashier's cheque given Sonji for $1,250, representing the alimony payment due Easter Sunday — and about which Sonji had expressed concern.

When she muttered about missing at 1 p.m. checkout time at her Miami hotel while awaiting the payoff, one of Clay's attorneys added a $50 bill for her.

The cheques and cash were turned over to Sonji at the Miami Beach offices of Clay's attorney Milton Grummark, where Sonji waited most of the afternoon before she collected.

She was dressed in a form-fitting, sleeveless blue knit dress and wore linked red earrings that rattled when she moved her head.

CAMERA MODEL

Clutching the two cheques and the $50 bill, short-haired Sonji posed for photographers, holding up the cheques.

"Give us a Clay pose, like the winner," said a cameraman. And Sonji curled out a hip, flung up her hands and smiled broadly.

"Hey, who's the greatest?" asked a cameraman. "Who's the greatest now? I am, me," shot back pretty Sonji.

KEEPS RINGS

She still wore Clay's diamond-studded engagement and wedding rings and said she planned to keep wearing them. In fact, she said, "I'm just not gonna get married again, never for 10 years. I'm not gonna let him slide outta his alimony."

Clay was ordered when he was granted the divorce from Sonji to pay her the $12,500 monthly for 12 months — 10 years and one month.

SHOWED ALL

Clay charged in the divorce petition that Sonji hadn't lived up to the part of the wife of a Black Muslim, the religious sect he adopted. He particularly complained about form-fitting clothes she wore and one pair of tight pants that showed off "all of her."

Sonji, who has been doing a singing act in Key West and Miami Beach nightclubs since she was divorced, hauled Cassius into court again last week for failing to pay the attorneys' fees and alimony.

JAIL THREATENED

Judge Harold Spaet put off a hearing Friday when Clay failed to show up, and when he failed to show up or pay up at a second hearing on Tuesday, Spaet threatened to have Clay jailed. He finally relented and gave Cassius another 48 hours to get the money together.

The payoff was just under the wire, about 6 p.m. the proceedings were delayed by a dispute over whether Sonji would sign the joint income tax return for 1965, when she and Clay were married.

Big Jean Scores Game-Winner

MONTREAL (CP)—Jean Beliveau's goal with just over two minutes remaining earned Montreal Canadiens a 4-3 victory Thursday night in the first game of their best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final series against Toronto Maple Leafs.

The Montreal team captain took a forward pass from Claude Provost, who had stolen the puck from a Toronto defenceman, and beat Terry Sawchuk in the Leafs' net with a wrist shot that rose a bare six inches off the ice.

Beliveau had Toronto defenceman Bob Baum draped around his neck as he let the shot go.

DRIFTS IN

The 14,410 fans had plenty to roar about, as with only 10 seconds remaining in the contest, Toronto centre Dave Keon drifted in alone to beat Lorne (Gump) Worsley in the Montreal nets.

However, referee Frank Udvari disallowed the goal, ruling that the play was offside.

Toronto led 2-1 at the end of the first period and Montreal held a 3-2 edge at the end of the second.

OUTSHOT LEAFS

The Canadiens outshot the Leafs 32-26 on the night's play, holding a 10-6 edge in the opening period, and 10-9 in the final stanza. Toronto held a 13-12 margin in the middle frame.

In addition to Beliveau's winner, Canadiens got power-play goals from J. C. Tremblay in the first period and Bobby Rousseau in the second with John Ferguson also scoring in the middle frame.

Toronto marksmen were Ed die Shack and Frank Mahovlich in the opening 20 minutes, and Bob Pulford at the end.

GOOD START

Shack got the Leafs off to a good start with just over two minutes elapsed in the game.

The goal came as the direct result of a Montreal defensive lapse. Rousseau passed the puck to Shack's stick inside the Montreal blueline. Shack relayed to Red Kelly who passed to Pulford at the corner of the Montreal net.

The Leaf centre promptly diverted the puck back to Shack who was cruising in front of Worsley and Toronto held a 1-0 edge.

ON POWER PLAY

Canadiens got that one back 10 minutes later on a power-play goal by defenceman J. C. Tremblay. He beat Sawchuk from just inside the blueline as the Toronto defence and teammate Yvan Cournoyer acted as an effective screen.

At 16:09 Beliveau picked up a hooking penalty, and one second before he was due to return to the ice Frank Mahovlich gave the Leafs a 2-1 lead.

Mahovlich deflected Armstrong's go-ahead pass past Worsley, after the Montreal goaltender had moved to the opposite side of the net to defend against the Toronto captain.

The second period was just over three minutes old when net. Tremblay's blueline partner Ted Harris stepped in, followed by Ferguson and Doug-Las.

Rousseau gave Montreal the lead for the first time as he combined with J. C. Tremblay and Cournoyer for a power-play goal while Toronto defenceman Larry Hillman was sitting out a high-sticking penalty.

FIGHT BREAKS OUT

Three minutes later a fight broke out when Leafs' Armstrong threw a punch at J. C. Tremblay behind the Montreal

SETS STAGE

That set the stage for Beliveau's game-winning counter. The game lacked sustained action, and both sides appeared wary of taking too many chances. Udvari called a dozen minor penalties, seven against the Leafs.

STANLEY LIMBS OFF

At the 13-minute mark of the second period, Leafs defenceman Allan Stanley made his first appearance on the ice, but was shortlived. Stanley left seconds later, limping to the Leaf bench.

"Stanley's out for the season," Imlach said.

"Three weeks ago when he was first hurt, we were told it was a sprain and he should be operated on. But Stanley is an important part of my team and I thought we might be able to strengthen it for the series, but I was wrong. He will be operated on right away."

Imlach is also worried about his first-string goalie John Bower, who was slated to start but was sidelined when he came down with influenza Thursday afternoon.

"John has the flu, and will miss Saturday's game," Imlach said. He did not say when Bower will be ready to play again.

Jack Overcomes Grief, Foes

By MILTON REICHMAN

AUGUSTA, Ga. (UPI)—Grief-stricken Jack Nicklaus, nearly numbed from a tragedy which claimed the lives of four of his friends who were coming to cheer him on, still shot a superlative four-under-par 68 Thursday for the opening round lead in defence of his Master's title.

Visibly upset about losing his friends in a plane crash in the mountains of Tennessee, Nicklaus retained his composure as he fired a 33-35 on the chilly, windblown 6,800-yard Augusta National course.

Battling his own emotions and a capricious wind which blew as much as 30 miles an hour in sudden gusts, Nicklaus launched his bid to become the first golfer ever to win two Masters' championships back-to-back by taking a three-stroke lead over former U.S. Open champion Billy Casper, Mike Kuchar, Don Janney and a amateur Charlie Casper.

Four-time winner Arnold Palmer, who had to scramble for a 74, felt that "if the wind lets up, someone would have to go like hell to catch Nicklaus."

Palmer wrecked any chance he might have had by driving into a sand trap on the 12th and then requiring two strokes to get out.

Grouped together four strokes off the pace with even par 72s were former PGA champ Jay Herbert, Ray Floyd, Randy Glover and Britain's Peter Butler. They were followed at 73 by two other one-time PGA titleholders, Lionel Hebert and Don Finsterwald and R. H. Silles and George Knudson of Toronto, the only Canadans.

Doug Sanders, Gary Player, Tony Lama, Tommy Aaron, Bruce Crampton of Australia, Roberto DeVicenzo of Argentina and Palmer had to be satisfied with the same 74 as amateurs Jim Grant and John Hopkins.

NICKLAUS SHOCKED

Nicklaus first learned of the tragedy involving his friends only hours after it occurred on a hillside near Johnson City, Tenn., Wednesday night.

Two couples from Jack's home in Columbus, O., Mr. and Mrs. Robert Barton and Mr. and Mrs. James Long, were killed when a private plane carrying them to Augusta crashed.

Barton was a particularly close friend of Nicklaus. The two frequently played golf together at the Skokie Country Club in Columbus, Nicklaus' home course, and went duck hunting in Canada last fall.

Jack even served as an usher at the Barton wedding. Nicklaus, who set an all-time Master's record last year when he wiped out Ben Hogan's previous 72-hole total of 274 with a 17-under-par 271, was among the last starters in the 103-man field Thursday, and the impact of the disaster upon him was immediately noticeable.

He hooked his very first shot but recovered brilliantly with a second shot over the trees that put him on the green only 20 feet from the cup. He sensibly sank the putt for the first of his four birdies during the day.

Members of Club de Hockey Saint Laurent visited city hall here Thursday, and were feted with doughnuts and pop. The midget team in the picture consists of 16 players, two coaches and a general manager. They'll participate in the minor hockey jamboree, playing three feature games against Victoria midgets—today, Saturday and Sunday—at Victoria Memorial Arena.

Feathers Flying In Badminton

CALGARY — Stu Barnard, 32, who played for Newark vice-president of the Canadian Badminton Association, wants a new vote to determine Canada's team for the Commonwealth Games Aug. 4-14 in Jamaica. Named to the team after the recent Canadian finals were Alison Daymond and Judy Hummel of Victoria, Wayne Macdonell, Ed and Rolf Paterson, Vancouver; Sharon Whitaker, Toronto; Pat Espley and Yves Pare of Montreal.

Barnard has asked that all 37 executive members of the CBA be polled and feels that Jamie Paulson and Jean Folinsbee of Calgary should have been on the team.

SPORTS CAR RACING has claimed another life. Walt Haase, 46, Bedford, N.J., died in Orleans, France Thursday. He was driving a car which he was driving in a Le Mans practice flipped and crushed him.

Johnny Langdon suffered a slight wrist injury and declined to drive a harness sulky at Santa Anita Wednesday. Quebec Aces are demanding a one-year suspension for Buffalo defenceman Ed Van Impe, who was quoted as saying that Claude Lafarge was lucky to have got off so lightly after he broke his jaw and four teeth in a recent American Hockey League game.

This Hole-in-One Almost Legitimate

GREELEY, Colo. (AP) — The golf season has barely opened, but city councilman Charles Gregory doubts if it will produce a hole-in-one to top this one.

He and Paul Young were walking down the fairway of the sixth hole at Highland Hills Wednesday and were at least 275 yards from the tee when Gregory felt something brush his right side. Gregory stuck his hand in his trousers pocket and there was a strange golf ball.

It was the drive that Gary Gagan, Colorado State College player, had driven from the tee of the 533-yard hole. Bob Montgomery, college golf coach, was playing with Gagan.

Man on Cross Prayed 'Forgive Them'

By LOUIS CARROLL
UPI

It had been a long night, and he was already exhausted when they brought him before the Roman governor for trial. He had been betrayed by one of his disciples and deserted by the others. There had been a rowdy preliminary hearing at which his captors slapped him around and shouted at him.

Now, through the haze of fatigue, he heard Pontius Pilate pronouncing the most dreaded sentence a Roman court could impose: Crucify him.

Not for Romans

Imperial Rome was not noted for its gentleness with condemned men. But even the Romans had qualms about this horrible method of execution which they had learned from the Persians. No Roman citizen could be put to death by crucifixion, whatever his crime. It was reserved for slaves and foreigners of revolution.

Roman soldiers seized him roughly and hauled him off to their barracks. These soldiers were members of the Second Italian Cohort, stationed in Palestine on occupation duty. They feared and hated the proud people whom they kept in subjugation. Now they had a chance to vent their anti-Semitism on one who had been found guilty of claiming to be "the King of the Jews."

They bound him by the wrists to a post in the outdoor court of the barracks and took turns lashing his bare back with a whip. It was a special kind of whip called a scourge, made of leather straps weighted with bits of metal.

Barracks Wit

Prisoners often died from a scourging. But the soldiers planned a little horseplay with this one. So they kept flogging him while he was still conscious.

One barracks wit took off his scarlet legionnaire's cloak and put it over the prisoner's shoulders, in imitation of a king's royal purple robe. Another plaited a crown of sharp briars to fit on his head. Someone else put a reed in his hand to resemble a sceptre. Then they approached his "throne" one by one, kneeling before him in mock homage, and striking to spit in his face.

About 8 a.m., they led him out to crucifixion.

It was customary to make a prisoner carry his own cross to the place of execution. But the terrible beating he had received had left him almost too weak to walk, and so the soldiers seized a passer-by named Simon and compelled him to carry the cross. Simon was from Cyrene, a city in North Africa. Ancient tradition holds that he was a Negro.

Gambled for Tunic

The execution site was known as "Golgotha" (in Latin, Calvary), which means "place of a skull." It was on a hill outside the city walls, near one of the main roads into Jerusalem.

They stripped off all of his clothing. It was part of the humiliation of crucifixion that the prisoner should hang there naked. His clothing became the property of the execution squad. They divided some of his garments among them, and cast dice for a seamless tunic which could not be divided.

Now came the worst part. They set him astride a wooden peg which jutted out from the upright pole of the cross, and made him stretch out his arms along the crossbeam. They drove nails through the palms of his hands to hold him there.

Drugged Wine

Then they nailed his feet to the upright pole, in an awkward position that insured the utmost agony to the muscles of his limp and hanging body.

Some pious women of Jerusalem made a practice of going to crucifixions and administering a heavily drugged wine to condemned men to alleviate their suffering. The good women were on hand today. But this prisoner refused their offer.

It was 3 o'clock in the morning when they nailed him to the cross. He usually took about 12 hours for a crucified man to die from the shock of excruciating pain. The Roman author Cicero records that many of the victims became raving madmen. It was often necessary to cut out their tongues to put a stop to their terrible screams and curses.

Only Six Hours

But this was a most unusual person. As he looked down from the cross at the people who were laughing and sneering at his helpless plight, he was heard to say: "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." Weakened by the scourging, he did not have long to live. Only six hours.

Toward the end, he cried aloud:

"My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" Commentators have been pointing out ever since that these are the opening words of the 22nd Psalm, which devout Jews used as a prayer in extremity. But no amount of scholarly explanation can minimize the sheer human agony of mind and spirit reflected in that pathetic cry.

Even in his final hour, however, he did not become preoccupied with his own troubles. He was still concerned about others. He saw his mother weeping at the foot of the cross, and asked a friend to take her home. He spoke words of comfort to another condemned man undergoing the same torture. At 3 p.m., he said: "Father, into thy hands I commit my spirit." It was finished. His Father would take care of the rest.

At the 9:45 a.m. service at Stevenson Memorial and also at service will be held in Emmanuel. Mr. Archer will speak on the topic "If Christ Be Not Risen." The ordinance of the Lord's Supper will follow the 11 a.m. service. In the evening a joint service will be held in Emmanuel at 7:30 p.m. and Mr. Archer will speak on "Where Have They Laid Him?"

He made up his mind to become a preacher and resigned to study theology at London University. On graduation he was called to the pastorate of the St. James Road Baptist Church in Watford.

At the invitation of the Baptist Union of Western Canada he came to Canada in 1962 as pastor of Parkview Baptist Church in North Surrey. Mr. Archer's wife, Mary, is a native of the Okanagan and is a graduate of the Royal Columbian Hospital nursing school in New Westminster. The Archers have two sons, Paul, 6, and Timothy, 4½.

THE VOICE OF ONE

By REV. DR. FRANK S. MORLEY

HMFRF HMH HM RFRMF RFR RFRFRFRF
"And you He made alive who were dead in trespasses and sins." This is the Christian Gospel. It is as simple as that; it is as profound as that.

Christianity is not philosophy, nor is it a code of ethics, nor the Ten Commandments, nor "trying to be good," nor social reform. In a sense it includes all of them, but they do not define Christianity.

Christianity is a gift, not an attainment. The new life comes as an act of God, not an achievement of man. So St. Paul continues in the second chapter of Ephesians, "God, who is rich in mercy, for the great love with which He loves us, even when we were dead in sins, has made us alive together with Christ (by grace ye are saved), and hath raised us up together."

Now do not say that St. Paul is using pictorial language. Take this seriously; don't water it down. Paul means it literally. Sin is death. Only God can give life. The Christian Gospel is the good news of a stupendous miracle of God's goodness. Christ came as our Redeemer; in these verses Paul binds together the redemption, resurrection, and ascension of Christ.

All that man builds crumbles. All that he touches turns to dust. In his highest aspirations he is most conscious of sin. He feels enslaved to the animal part of his nature. All around him he sees the havoc of time's ravages and the fatality of everlasting darkness.

Who can redeem us from ultimate despair, give us unity with a Reality above the world, and fill us with the profound happiness of an immortal vocation, or assure our uttermost hearts that our dear loves are imperishable?

-Yet Not Golden Age

We are clever people. We like a surgeon's knife. "By grace we are saved through faith; and that not of ourselves, it is the gift of God." And suddenly — O miracle of the living God — I know that I am like as He has given Himself to me. Life revives and the light shines.

Prayer: O Thou Eternal, who turnest the shadow of death into the morning, cleanse our minds, heal our hearts, touch our souls, and lift us from the tomb of our dead selves into the company of the risen Christ.

Coins Given To Elderly

LONDON (Reuters) — The Queen, in a centuries-old Christian custom, distributed newly-minted silver coins to elderly men and women. Forty Londoners—custom decrees "as many as the sovereign is years of age"—received the coins as part of the traditional Easter-week almsgiving.

Familiar Mailbox Up-Dated

LONDON (CP)—That familiar feature of British streets, the tall, red, circular mailbox, is about to come up-to-date by going square.

Postmaster-General Anthony Wedgwood Benn is considering a new design with rectangular replaceable panels which enable mailmen to speed up their collections.

The box protrudes beyond the pedestal so that a mailbag can be hooked underneath. The mailman then presses a lever and the hinged floor of the box drops down into a chute, releasing a cascade of mail into the bag.

At present, the mailman has to unlock two sets of doors and scoop the letters by hand out of the wire cage inside the box. The first public mailbox—or "pillarbox" as Britons call them—appeared in the Channel Islands in 1851, and the first one in London came two years later. It was on the corner of Fleet and its shape was square.

Network Fills Moscow Post

NEW YORK (AP) — The American Broadcasting Company has announced that George Watson will be chief of its Moscow bureau, which has been without a head since the expulsion of Sam Jaffe last Sept. 20. Jaffe was expelled after ABC correspondent John Scall reported from Washington that there were signs of a Khrushchev shakeup.

Leisure to Work!

By M. V. CHEESNUT

With a lovely long holiday weekend ahead of us, let us hope the weatherman will lay on lots of sunshine and not too much wind—just enough to dry off the soil as we get the last of the digging done.

While there are lots of major jobs to be tackled, there are a few little odd bits and pieces which may get lost in the shuffle.

There are the sweet peas, for instance. Sweet peas which were sown last fall should be around three or four inches tall now, and it is time to pinch the tip out of each plant. This pinching will cause a couple of strong shoots to emerge from near the base of the plant—much stronger and more vigorous than the original or "maiden" shoot.

If you want really top quality flowers, leave only one of these secondary shoots to train up, nipping off the weaker one of the two. If you prefer just reasonably good flowers but more of them, you can train both these basal shoots up, producing, in effect, two vines from one set of roots. One very important job, often neglected, is to provide a row of short twiggy sticks to support the sweet peas until they are tall enough to reach their netting or strings or whatever support is provided. If sweet peas—or garden peas, for that matter—are allowed to topple over while young, they develop a kink in their stems which restricts the flow of sap, just as a kink in the hose checks the flow of water.

Violas and pansies always seem to do a lot better when you can get them settled down in their permanent quarters fairly early in the season, and this is a job which can well be done this weekend. Both flowers prefer a little light shade, although this is not essential, and both enjoy really rich, woody soil fortified with a good dose of wood ashes—two double handfuls per square yard, just scratched shallowly into the surface.

Space your violas eight inches apart and your pansies a good 12 inches each way. Keep them watered regularly until growth starts again after the transplanting setback, and nip off all flower buds for the next two weeks to conserve their strength while they are settling down and getting their root hairs established.

If you planted any evergreen shrubs last fall or earlier this spring, it would be a good idea to devote at least a small portion of the Easter weekend to looking them over carefully, for any flagging or drooping or loss of foliage in an evergreen is bad business. While there is plenty of moisture in the soil at this time of year, this moisture isn't always being pumped up to the leaves as it should be.

It sometimes happens that frosts have heaved the new shrubs up out of the soil, severing the delicate root hairs. It is a wise precaution to tread the soil down around each shrub, making the roots very firm in the ground, then covering the surface with a mulch of some sort to prevent the trodden soil from baking hard in the sun.

With any newly-planted shrub or tree, it is always a race to get the root hairs re-established in the soil and pumping moisture up to the leaves before the foliage can die of thirst. You can stack the odds in the favor of survival by spraying the foliage of evergreens with Wilt-Pruf, a liquid plastic, to slow down the loss of moisture through evaporation.

Nature Annoys Campers

In the beginning there were clear streams, virgin woods and wildlife in abundance. Man discovered it, pitched a tent and called it camping.

Then man, looking at the trees, rationalized they should have some use. So he strung them with cords and fuse boxes, plugged in his electric blanket, electric shaver, electric coffee pot, electric heater and electric marital stirrer. He called it camping.

Man finally took a good long look at the animals, scurrying for shelter and food, and rationalized they were a menace. So he upped the garbage collection, moved the site to two a day, installed street lights, power mowed the grass down to golf-green height and still... called it camping.

A national outdoors magazine has warned that "true camping" will soon become extinct if people don't stop demanding more and more of the comforts they seldom had at home. Not to mention a rise in camping costs, which heretofore has been one of the stronger endowments for going without a hot bath for a week!

No, I wouldn't be at all surprised if Virginia and Ralphie pulled up their block-long trailer in front of our house this summer and told us how they "roughed it with nature."

"We found this divine little campsite. Restricted, of course, to only self-contained trailers. None of those little dowdy tents about. Well, after our "camp hog" got us settled with ice and fresh knives, we settled down for a before-dinner drink and flipped on our stereo. Would you believe it? That infernal rushing of the falls nearby made it virtually impossible to hear the quality.

"On Wednesday, the sand had literally destroyed my hair and I went to the Camp's Beauty Shop. The children went to the camp's game room for an outdoor movie, and Ralphie went to the Camp's general store for supplies.

"You can't imagine how quaint and rustic that was. Imagine never having heard of liver pate? I mean one can camp, but one can still be civilized.

"Let me see now. Oh yes, the children saw an animal on Friday... or was it Sunday? No, Friday. It was one of those rare little furry things. They tell me it was quite unusual to see even one. What was it, Ralphie? A squirrel. That's it. A squirrel. The children were thrilled to death."

In the beginning, there were clear streams, virgin woods and wildlife in abundance. And if enough people leave their homes in the cities to pursue their, the rest of us might be able to sit on our own back porches and look at the stars, watch a few animals dart across the grass and listen to the rustle of the trees. We call it camping.

Bigger the Smaller

By SYDNEY HARRIS

"It's an interesting thing about fractions," observed my 10-year-old boy the other night, while he was grappling with his homework. "The larger the bottom number gets, the smaller it really is."

This seems so obvious to us that we never think of it. Of course, one-tenth is smaller than one-fifth, and one-twentieth is even smaller. As the bottom figure gets larger, it actually shrinks in value.

Now, considering the total human population as a whole number — which it is — everybody is a fraction. And the bigger this fraction tries to be, the smaller it really becomes.

This is a fatal argument against self-importance. For each of us tends to behave as if he were a whole number which could increase almost indefinitely — when, actually, each of us is a fraction of the whole, whose top a number always remains the same: 1.

How, then, do we increase the sum of human value? Not by inflating the bottom number, which only makes us smaller, but by adding one person to another, until the total figure approaches a whole number. This is the true purpose of any social system: to sustain an equation by addition, not by division.

If this is too abstract to visualize, the same lesson can be drawn by noting what happens to human "fractions" in any smaller social system — say, a business firm.

The larger any one individual becomes in this firm, the smaller becomes the firm's value — because if this one individual goes, too much power and responsibility go with him, and there is chaos after his departure. In seeking to become more important than he should, he has actually reduced the total importance of the system.

Many business failures occur, indeed, precisely because they are top-heavy, and no chain of command has been forged that is strong enough to withstand the loss of the man at the apex. His strength — like the dubious "strength" of a dictator — has only weakened the whole structure in its ability to survive his leaving.

Genuine power of personality is rarely individual power — rather, it is the power to contribute heavily toward a system that will be stronger after we leave it than when we joined it.

Napoleon actually weakened France, just as Hitler weakened Germany, for by inflating the lower figure in the fraction, they eventually reduced the whole number to impotence.

And the moral arguments against them are less conclusive than the mathematical proof that such self-assertion must, by its very nature, always fall in the end.

Society Drops Zsa Zsa's Mate

LONDON (NANA)—Zsa Zsa Gabor's new groom, Josh Couden, Jr., has been dropped from the Dallas social register. Now, I wonder why... And this is one for the book. Julie Christie and Julie Andrews will be living together in Miss Andrews' home in Hollywood, at Oscar time. I don't have to remind you that they will be fighting it out for the award... Miss Andrews is also top contender for Oliver with Susan Somers and the original Pagan, Ros Moody, in the film version.

Peter Sellers is receiving $750,000 against 10 per cent of the gross from Casino Royale, and I learned that Peter did not want to do the film, so producer Charlie Feldman, who is not easily put off, said to him: "Name your conditions. That's all you have to say to an actor and you are up to your neck in problems."

Marion Brando isn't as popular with the British as he was before he snubbed The Queen by refusing to appear at the Horn Free command performance at the last hour, after previously accepting. The showing was for a British movie charity, which doubled the offence. If I were Brando's agent I would advise him to do a stage play, fast. Because he hasn't had a movie hit for a long, long time.

Leslie Caron says the reason she bowed out of The Defectors was not because she was unreasonable in her financial demands. They kept changing the script, says Leslie, and with Montgomery Clift being a bit on the nervous side — this is his first movie in years — she was afraid she would have been stuck in Munich for longer than she wanted to be.

Barbra Streisand was stopped in her tracks when she was asked, on BBC 2, exactly how much money she earns. The British are always concerned with money. But she did admit that she was the highest paid performer in the world. I don't go around asking people how much they earn, but I would think that people like Elizabeth Taylor and Sammy Davis, not to overlook Frank Sinatra, earn much more than Barbra.

David McCallum and Robert Vaughn knocked the Beatles off their perch as the most-screamed-after performers in London. No one misses their Man from U.N.C.L.E. show... do you want to know why Francoise Truffaut's picture is called Fahrenheit 451? This is the heat at which paper catches fire. Just thought you'd like to know.

Ferry Crews' Lawyer Asks Rain Check

Three Do Not a Cabinet Make

A lawyer representing disgruntled B.C. ferry crews has been invited to appear before a cabinet subcommittee, but she'll take a rain check.

Marney Stevenson, who heard about the meeting set for Tuesday long after word had been released to the press, represents catering and deck crews who have no union.

The crews staged a brief work stoppage New Year's Day in protest of 1966 work schedules. Mrs. Stevenson took their case to the Civil Service Commission without satisfaction.

Her later appeals for a board of reference have been rejected.

by the cabinet which alone has the power to set up the board. The meeting scheduled for Tuesday is with Provincial Secretary Weslie Black, Lands and Forests Minister Ray Williston and Works Minister W. N. Chant.

It was announced by Mr. Black Thursday. A representative of Mrs. Stevenson's law firm will attend to ask for an adjournment.

Mrs. Stevenson said the subcommittee meeting is a ploy by the cabinet to circumvent setting up the board of reference. "If we accepted the meeting, the cabinet could say that's the end of the issue and we would never get a board of reference," she said.

Mouse Banned from Show

Horace Misses Flash of Glory

By BILL STAYDAL
Horace the mouse has missed his moment of glory in Greater Victoria's school science fair. The show features 42 imaginative projects by budding scientists. It opens Saturday for a week in the Douglas Room of The Bay.

But Horace, having done his

J. W. Anderson, 2026 McAnally, wife of a surgeon and a member of the SPCA.

"I don't think youngsters of that age should be using live animals to experiment on," said Mrs. Anderson on Thursday. "You can't be sure what the treatment will be."

Mr. Gough said he agreed with Mrs. Anderson's feelings that other children might be encouraged to experiment with animals without adult supervision.

OXYGEN NEEDS
Colin, a Grade 8 student at Lansdowne Junior High School, based his experiment on the thesis of a student at the University of British Columbia.

He assembled oxygen-generating equipment which piped the gas to Horace, sealed in a glass jar with only the end of a thermometer for company.

With simple measuring equipment and some mathematics, Colin was able to calculate Horace's oxygen needs at temperatures ranging from 50 degrees Fahrenheit to 88 degrees. He also studied Horace asleep, and busy preening himself.

'QUITE MAD'
Conclusions: a mouse needs more oxygen when he's cold, also when he is active.

"I'm quite mad," Colin commented Thursday as he set up his display along with other exhibitors.

"Having Horace here would have had dramatic value," he said.

Every mark counts. Colin, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Griffiths, is shooting for a trip to the national school science fair in Windsor and a share of $1,200 in prize money.

'I LEARNED'
Colin admitted that he lost one mouse before he learned to regulate temperature in the glass breathing chamber.

"But I think it was in the interest of science," he said. "I learned to avoid making the same mistake."

The fair, fifth to be held here, is attracting interest from a wide range of sponsors. Much of the money is being put up by the Canadian Centennial Commission.

His master, 13-year-old Colin Griffiths, 1964 Argyle Avenue, is annoyed.

Horace isn't being saved from an evil fate by being left at home. He's already done his work: having his oxygen consumption measured at varying temperatures and states of activity.

John Gough, district superintendent of schools, banned Horace's appearance in the science fair after he received several complaints.

Animals Not Alive

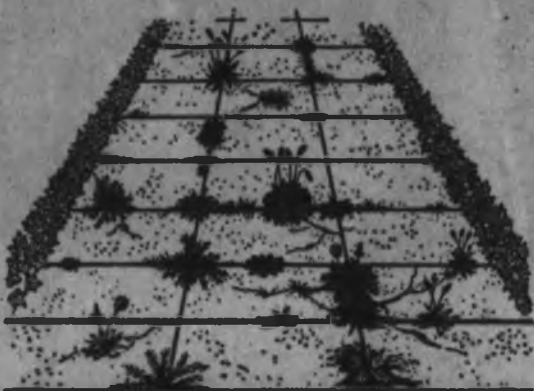

Greater Victoria high school students perform no experiments on live animals, a school board spokesman said Wednesday.

Harry Dee, director of secondary education, said there was no parallel here to a court decision this week in New Jersey permitting high school experiments on live animals.

Patio or Driveway weeds?

FIGHT BACK! WITH ORTHO!

TRIOX kills ugly weeds on driveways, patios, walks!

Without bending... without stooping... without digging, you can get rid of every single weed that's marring your patio, your driveways, your walks, curbs or gutters. All you do is dilute and sprinkle TRIOX. It's as simple as that.

TRIOX does more than just wipe out established weeds. It prevents new growth for as long as two full years. Seeds wither and die before they can get started again, so you can forget about the work of old-fashioned weeding for a long, long time.

A word of caution. Since TRIOX application kills all vegetation, you don't want to use it on lawns or cultivated areas. For lawn weeds, use ORTHO WEED-B-GON.

Whatever your weed problem, ORTHO can have it licked this very weekend. See your garden supplier today!

What thousands couldn't see, helicopter found as ships sailed Victoria's shores

Armada Home—Radar Shows

By BOB PETERICK

A 94-day cruise ended for six ships of the navy's Maritime Command Pacific, with sailors hunting for their home port and finding it—on radar.

Then dense fog which rolled into the strait brought disappointment to thousands of spectators who lined the waterfront to get their first glimpse at one of the largest naval armadas assembled here in quite a while.

"They are out there somewhere—you can hear the whistles," said one disgruntled spectator.

Camera bugs shook their

Foggy Arrival Cruise 'Dark Spot'

heads in disgust and their fists at the fog but it didn't do any good.

As the fleet drew closer to Esquimalt visibility improved until it could be plainly seen from areas like Saxe Point Park and Fleming Beach.

Something everyone was able to see was the fly-past of Comox-based anti-submarine Neptune aircraft.

The fact that the fleet actually was there was confirmed by photographers in an RCAF helicopter who brought back pictures of the formation sailing.

From the navy's point of view, the 20,500-mile trip and manoeuvres in the Caribbean with units of the Maritime Command Atlantic were a success.

"We made the complete gambit of fleet operations with (HMCS) Bonaventure. We were able to exercise all facets of operations," said squadron commander Capt. William Kidd.

Capt. Kidd was pleased with the performance. "I would take them anywhere," he said.

The operation was entirely self-supporting, and while some groceries and oil were purchased in South America, there wasn't a real need for them, Capt. Kidd said.

As for reported misbehavior of sailors of the fleet, Capt. Kidd said they could stand on their record.

"Not one criminal charge was laid during the entire trip," he said.

And about the famous pinch that was heard around the world, he said:

"I was amazed when I heard of the reported incident. I believe the Brazilian navy was as shocked as we were."

He pointed out the navy had done some good work, which included repairing a school, holding parties for refugee children, and flocking to blood donor clinics.

"The men volunteer for these tasks. They are not compelled to do them by the navy," he said.

City Heliport To Be Used Before Fall

By A. H. MURPHY

Helicopters will be landing and taking off from a municipally-owned pad in Victoria West by the end of the summer, city officials said Friday.

The civic heliport will not be completed by that time, but it will be serviceable and in use, according to Ald. Cecil Parrott, chairman of city council public works committee.

And it will represent fruition of an idea which had been expensive in terms of time, but not money.

The site, near the corner of Esquimalt Road and Tyee Road on a rocky knoll which commands one of the best 360-degree views of the city, has been described by a federal Department of Transport official as "the finest heliport site in the whole of North America."

Thousands of tons of fill, much of it from the new provincial museum on Belleville Street, have been dumped to make a level surface on what was an extremely irregular location. Damping will continue even after summer's end, when the heliport is in use. The idea is to expand the area which will be used, until it encompasses from four to five acres.

Other Facilities

Not only is there the landing pad to be considered, but parking areas and space for a fuel depot, control building and passenger waiting rooms. These will be added over the years as the need stimulated by increasing traffic demands.

City Engineer James Garnett, under whose supervision the work is being done, and Ald. Parrott led a group of aldermen and city officials on a tour of public works installations this week. They inspected the heliport site and were pleased with what they saw.

Many years ago the city reserved land further west, near Victoria West Park, for a helicopter site, but abandoned it when the present location, once occupied by a junkyard operated by Harry Haigh, came into the city's possession.

The Department of Transport gave its enthusiastic blessing four or five years ago, and two years ago $35,000 was allocated in the capital budget for development. From that time work has steadily progressed, and fill of all kinds has been pouring into the area.

Mr. Garnett pointed out some of the advantages of the site Friday. There was an uninterrupted approach from the sea, and helicopters would ride down the flight path on the prevailing southwest wind.

Bridge in Plans

The approach from the north, on the other hand, was over an area not only of low-lying land but low buildings.

The whole idea of a heliport for the district was originally based on the premise that someday there would be a helicopter service between Victoria and Vancouver. Until that becomes a reality the civic pad will be used by local owners and transportation companies, and by the navy.

will have been raised so that the bridge will not be a hazard to incoming aircraft.

Brief Seeks More Aid To Students

Increased financial aid to higher education was recommended Thursday by the B.C. division of the Canadian Student Social Credit Federation.

The newly-formed branch, in a brief presented to Education Minister Peterson and Provincial Secretary Black, also advocated appointment of a public defender and liberalization of B.C.'s liquor laws.

The brief was presented Thursday afternoon by a three-man delegation headed by Elmer Grenke, president of the B.C. division and a student at the University of Victoria.

The brief urged an extension of government scholarship and bursary plans so that all first-class students obtain free tuition, and all second-class students get half-payment of fees.

Labor Officer Given Raise

A $50-a-month increase in wages for secretary Harry Anderson, was approved Wednesday by the Victoria Labor Council.

Mr. Anderson's raise from $40 to $50 a month, is effective from April 1.

Mr. Anderson will also have his medical insurance costs paid by the council and receive $25 a month car allowance.

New Vote Seen On Hanging Bill

Abolition of the death penalty will come up again soon in Ottawa, this time as a private member's bill with built-in safeguards, Esquimalt-Saanich MP George Chatterton forecast Thursday.

"I'm in favor of abolition of the death penalty, with certain exceptions," he said.

There must be safeguards for police officers and prison guards, the Conservative MP said.

"The public also must be protected from psychotic murderers," he said. "Communing the death sentence for a murderer of this type makes it possible for him to be considered for parole in about nine years."

In Tuesday's free abolition vote in the House of Commons, he said, he voted for the Gauthier amendment—abolition except in the case of capital murder.

He also voted in favor of the Klein amendment, which would abolish hanging except in cases where police officers or prison guards had been killed.

INSTITUTE TOUR

"If the government had brought in a compromise bill, I'm certain it would have gone through," the MP said.

Liberal MP for Victoria David Gross is also in town for the holidays.

Both area MPs plan joint informal visits to some federal institutions before returning to Ottawa.

They plan to visit Veterans' Hospital, William Head minimum security institution, and the B.C. Penitentiary at New Westminster.

Buses Only Allowed On Tolmie

A large congregation is expected at Easter Sunday's sunrise services on Mount Tolmie, Saanich Diamond Jubilee committee chairman Ed Lum said Thursday.

The services will start on the summit at 7:30 a.m.

"Only official cars will be allowed up the mountain," chairman Lum said.

He explained that a bus shuttle service, starting at about 7 a.m. from the Shelbourne Shopping Plaza, will take people to the site.

"It would be almost impossible to find enough parking space if all cars were allowed up," he said.

The buses will pick up passengers along the route to the summit, he added.

If weather is unsuitable for services to be held on the summit, it is planned to hold them in the Lansdowne Junior High School's auditorium at the same time, Chairman Lum said.

Arm in arm, chiefs of the University of Victoria lead hundreds of students on a symbolic walk from the old Lansdowne campus north to the rising Gordon Head campus. From left are Chancellor J. B. Clearhue, President Malcolm Taylor, Ronald Jeffels,

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I laughed when I read the letter from the girl who was mad because her friend wore false eyelashes, a hair-piece, contact lenses and false teeth, and seemed to have great success with the men while she (who never misrepresented anything) did poorly by comparison. Then I remembered something I had read when I was a law student at Columbia and I looked it up.

If "Miss Loose Parts" had lived in England during the 18th century she would have been in serious trouble. Here is a law that was passed by the British Parliament in 1770:

"All women, of whatever age, rank, profession or degree, whether virgins, maids or widows, that shall impose upon, seduce or betray into matrimony any of His Majesty's subjects, by scents, paints, cosmetics, washes, artificial teeth, false hair, iron stave hoops, high-heeled shoes, bolstered hips or padded bosoms shall incur the penalty of the law enforced against witchcraft and like misdemeanors, and upon conviction, that marriage shall stand null and void." — THE OLD RESEARCHER.

Dear Researcher: It's interesting to learn that in 1770 a man could be seduced by high-heeled shoes. God save the king — and all other males who lived during those hazardous times.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband underwent exploratory surgery a few days ago. The

If you don't want to give details simply say, "The doctor said he's going to be fine. Thank you for asking." — and end the conversation right there.

Dear Ann Landers: I can tell it's been a long time since you were in college, dearie. When the student from Illinois wrote and said the professor favored the sexy girls, you accused the guy of being a sorehead. I go to school in Phoenix and the same thing happens here.

I got "A" papers all through the term but the prof gave me a "C" for the course. I ought to tell you that I am a male and the prof is a phony intellectual who gives me a pain in the sacroiliac. Is this your idea of fair? — THE HERETIC.

Dear H: Who said life was fair? If the prof gives you a pain in the sacroiliac you probably give him a pain in the same area. You have a lot to learn that isn't in the books. Bub.

Garfat-Mowat Wedding

Gold Nugget Brooch For 'Something Old'

A heart-shaped gold nugget brooch, which was given to her grandmother during the gold rush at Nome, Alaska, fulfilled the "something old" tradition for Marilyn Ann Mowat when she became the bride of Mr. Thomas Frederick Garfat.

Highlighting her floor-length Empire gown on train of white peau de sole was an overskirt of pink sheer nylon. Her lilac-toned net bridal veil was caught by a floral rosette and deep pink roses and stephanotis formed her cascade bouquet.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. G. Mowat, 863

Setkirk Avenue, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Frederick Garfat, 1448 Jamaica Road.

Standards of pink blossoms and pink and white gladiolus decorated Metropolitan United Church for the candlelight ceremony performed by Rev. E. Laura Butler. Completing the decorations, which were done by Mrs. G. Fay, were pew markers of white satin ribbons centred with white roses.

Mr. Mowat gave his daughter in marriage.

Mrs. Roy MacKay, who was soloist at the wedding of the bride's parents, sang The Lord's Prayer at the beginning of the ceremony and the Wedding Prayer during signing of the register.

Wedding cake made and decorated by the groom's mother.

For her going-away costume the bride chose an azure blue suit with white hat and black accessories.

The newlyweds will make their home at 330 Bensborough Road.

Celebrating their golden wedding anniversary on Easter Sunday are Mr. and Mrs. David Cobb, who were married by the late Dean Schofield in the old Christ Church Cathedral on April 30, 1916. To mark the special day Mr. and Mrs. Cobb will be at home for relatives and friends from 3 to 5 p.m. and 7 to 9 p.m. in their home at 28 Chancellor Avenue. Here from West Vancouver for the occasion will be son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. James Yates, and the honored couple's three grandchildren. Mr. Cobb left England in 1906, living in Belleville, Ont., until 1911, at which time he moved to Victoria. Mrs. Cobb came here in 1912 from England.

Matron of honor Mrs. Sigler, and bridesmaids the Misses Judy Mowat, Patricia Leam and Sandy Sinclair wore floor-length pink floral gowns styled with Empire waistlines and sleeveless bodices. The wore matching floral rosettes and tulle headpieces and white elbow-length gloves. Gold Wreath pendants, gifts of the bride, complemented their ensembles, and they carried cascade bouquets of pink carnations.

Mr. David Broad was best man. Ushering were Mr. Jim Garfat, Mr. Robert Garfat and Mr. Wayne Mowat.

Mr. Garret Fay proposed the toast to the bride at the reception which followed in Club Soho. A tiny goblet filled with pink roses topped the three

PERSONAL MENTION

By Dorothy Wrotnowski

There are always a few memories that stand out after any trip and it wasn't any different this time when I was down in Southern California with the travel delegates out to sell B.C. for all their worth.

At the expense of sounding like you name it — and I'm not, one of the things I will remember a long time is meeting Walt Disney.

Maybe it could be explained by curiosity, my desire to meet a man who could build a world wide Empire on a little mouse.

Anyway, when I heard that the Hon. Kenneth Klernan, B.C.'s minister of Recreation and Conservation was going to present an Indian mask to Disney I invited myself along.

You could almost call it fate-crashing even though it was a gentle crash as it had the full approval of David Crawley whose firm handles all the public relations for the B.C. group when they go South.

This is the way it went. Mr. Klernan, David and I with Indian masks in the back seat, drove out to the Disney studio from Hollywood one morning in plenty of time to keep the appointment. It is a known fact that Walt Disney keeps appointments on the dot.

On arrival we were shown into his private office through rooms where cases of trophies were on display. I wonder just how many hundreds of trophies this man has received or maybe I should say, earned.

This time, Walt Disney was about ten minutes late, plenty of time to take in everything in his office. Miniatures of Disney people and animals were along the window sills and yet there was no look of clutter. Pictures of his daughters, (when little girls), Diane (Mrs. Ronald Miller) and Sharon, Mrs. Robert Brown, were on the wall to the side of his desk.

On the wall opposite Disney's desk was rather a large picture. I am not going to say I was intrigued or fascinated because all I know was that I kept looking at it. Again and again.

Pictures don't usually have this effect on me. There is too much beauty everywhere that one can capture in one's own mind to worry whether you can afford a masterpiece for your living room wall. I'm not dispensing with art, I'm merely talking about people who can't afford it.

Back to the Disney picture. I can tell you about it but that won't really mean a thing. A scene — a narrow little road, boulders strewn at the sides, disappearing around a little mound with a tree at the turn. Mountains in the hazy background. All silvered greens and blues.

When Walt Disney walked into the room he murmured that he was sorry to keep us waiting (He didn't tell us till later that he had a session with the dentist) and immediately put us at ease. This is a gift.

Mr. Klernan then presented the carving of the mouse spirit mask to the creator of Mickey Mouse. He told Mr. Disney that the mouse mask was one of 15 animal masks used by the Kwakwaka'wakw Indians of B.C. in their traditional dances.

Walt Disney, after thanking Mr. Klernan, made up his mind very quickly as to where the mask should be placed on display in Disneyland.

Then there was picture taking and something happened that amused me and probably gives an insight into Disney's character.

After taking two or three shots, the photographer moved across the room to straighten Disney's tie.

After a startled second he said quite emphatically "Hell, don't worry about me, worry about the mouse."

"Beautiful" was his comment about his only visit to Victoria, a flying weekend trip there, (when little girls), Diane (Mrs. Ronald Miller) and Sharon, Mrs. Robert Brown, were on the wall to the side of his desk.

On the wall opposite Disney's desk was rather a large picture. I am not going to say I was intrigued or fascinated because all I know was that I kept looking at it. Again and again.

Back from South America

Grace Scott, wife of the well-known columnist, Jack Scott of the Toronto Star, spent the past weekend with Don and Mattie Jenkins at Booth Bay. She had with her daughters, Jenny and Jill. They will be back on the island this Easter weekend in a cottage at Rainbow Beach.

Married in Nanaimo

Of interest to their many friends is the recent marriage of Greta (Gillies) Roberts and Harry Armstrong Ireland which took place quietly at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Greta Roberts in Nanaimo. The Irelands are staying at Island Hall at present. They will return to Victoria.

The Scotts, who have a home on the island rented it when they went to South America.

Women Learn Bartending Trade

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — There is a definite future for bartenders in Canada, says Gerald Roy, and he aims to help meet the demand.

Mr. Roy has established a school for women bartenders here and in a four-week course they are taught how to mix more than 60 drinks.

The first course at the Canadian School of Bartending

Evening Of Music

The Studio Group of the Victoria Musical Art Society will meet at 8 p.m., Saturday, in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Niederman at 8351 East Saanich Road, Saanichton.

Piano selections by Miss Phyllis Hick and Miss Ann Jeffrey will be enjoyed during the evening of music that's been planned. Mezzo-soprano Mrs. R. F. Shupe will sing "Summertime" by George Gershwin, E. Greig's "Strange Music" and "Come to Me" from the First Movement of Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata."

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Fitzsimons will give a piano and mandolin duet and a variety of sacred and secular music will be performed by the Patriarch Quartet. One of the arrangements will be by Victor Tony Patriarch's version of the Beatles' "Help," set in a 19th century style. Other members of the quartet are Miss Yvonne Muir, soprano; Miss Diana Brown, contralto, and Mr. Cecil Elliott, bass.

had 20 students and there wasn't a bunny girl in the lot.

"There's a big difference between women bartenders and bunny girls," Mr. Roy says.

"Bunny girls are like cocktail waitresses. My students will be bartenders—they will be tending bar, mixing drinks."

Leo Atherton, a former bartender who is Mr. Roy's partner in the school, conducts three-hour classes each weekday afternoon and evening.

Much of the time is devoted to practicing, all of which is done with water colored to resemble the real thing. The trick to mixing drinks properly, Mr. Atherton says, is to get the proportions of ingredients right and to get them into the correct-shaking glass without having any liquid left over.

A St. Catharines hotel agreed to let the students gain practical experience in a real bar for one evening each during the course.

Mr. Roy says reaction of bar managers and bartenders to the idea of having women tend bar has been favorable. He has promises of jobs from three managers and, with a shortage of men bartenders in the area, feels there is plenty of scope for women in the field.

The Board of Directors of the Family and Children's Service of Victoria cordially invite you to attend their ANNUAL MEETING at 8:30 p.m., Wednesday, April 10th, 1968, in the Georgian Lounge of the Empress Hotel. The brief business meeting will be followed by a panel of distinguished speakers, who will discuss: "Juvenile Delinquency—its Prevention and Treatment."

A mouse for a mouse this picture may be named. Walt Disney compares his famed Mickey Mouse with the Indian Mouse spirit mask brought from British Columbia as a gift by the Hon. Kenneth Klernan, minister of recreation and conservation from B.C. Mr. Klernan visited the Walt Disney studio as a member of B.C.'s fifth annual government sponsored travel delegation.—(Disney Studio)

Barbara Goertzen Wins Biennial Scholarship

An 18-year-old daughter of a former Victorian couple has been awarded a $500 scholarship by the United Papermakers and Paperworkers International Union. Miss Barbara Jeanne Goertzen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Goertzen (who now make their home in North Surrey) received the news this week.

The award, which comes to Canada every two years was last won in 1964 by an eastern Canadian student. The new recipient plans to use the scholarship to assist her studies at Simon Fraser University. She intends to enter the teaching profession.

The Goertzens lived in Victoria until 1959 and Mr. Goertzen has been a member of the award-giving union for the past 23 years. While in Victoria he was employed by the Sidney Roofing Company. The company moved to Burnaby in 1959 and is now known as McMillan, Elson and Paper Board Division. Mr. Goertzen is still on its staff. Four such scholarships are given by the union each year.

Barbara Goertzen

A keen student, Miss Goertzen attended Quadra Street School while in Victoria and, on the mainland, Mary Jane Simon Elementary and Junior High Schools. She is now a Grade 12 student at North Surrey Senior High School.

$700,000 'In Wrong Hands'

SEBASTIAN, B.C. (CP) — Capt. E. R. Huxford, former harbor master at Sydney, N.S., said Thursday he is convinced the Fort Louisbourg treasure is in the wrong hands.

Capt. Huxford, who retired his post as harbor master and receiver of wrecks three years ago, said he will testify to that effect "in any court in Canada."

In Halifax, Mr. Justice L. D. Currie granted a five-partner group headed by Willard Dillon of Black Brook, N.S., an injunction Thursday restraining Alex Storm and his group of treasure hunters from disposing of any part of the $700,000 worth of gold and silver they recovered off the Louisbourg coast.

"I am absolutely convinced that Mr. Dillon and his partners have prior rights to the treasure," said Capt. Huxford, who moved to this community 30 miles north of Vancouver after his retirement.

"I told them in 1961 or 1962 they were entitled to the treasure just as long as they actively sought it," said the captain. "I had a letter here from Mr. Dillon about a year ago saying that he was anticipating trouble from a rival group."

The former harbor master said he granted treasure recovery rights to Mr. Dillon under the authority invested in him by the Canada Shipping Act as receiver of wrecks.

He said Mr. Dillon and his friends had staked out the French frigate Le Chateau during his term of office.

"They found the wreck, there's no question about that," he said.

"On clear days, by following the pattern of marker bouys they laid out you could see the outline of the ship, broken in two sections, about 130 feet apart."

"DANGEROUS WORK"

Capt. Huxford said Mr. Dillon located the ship, but not the French gold and silver it carried.

"It takes a long time to search out a broken vessel," he said. "That ship went down over 200 years ago, from cannon fire or what have you, and it was all grown over with seaweed and barnacles."

"It's dangerous, painstaking work."

Quebec Beer Cleared By Experts

QUEBEC (CP) — A committee of experts inquiring into the deaths of 16 heavy beer drinkers in the Quebec City region announced Thursday it has not been able to discover anything wrong with beer samples examined.

The committee was set up last month by the provincial health department on the same day that the only beer producer in the city, Dow Breweries, stopped production, ordered its stocks destroyed and reclaimed all of its stocks that were on the market.

Members of the committee reported in a statement that no traces of insecticide, pesticide, bacteria or other contamination had yet been discovered in the beer studied.

The statement also repeated an earlier report that spectrographic analysis of bottled beer had disclosed no harmful metallic elements.

Toxicologists experimenting on animals have not been able to discover any harmful side-effects to the beer, the committee said.

Those involved in the inquiry are members of the health department staff, the justice department's medico-legal laboratories and the federal health and welfare department. Also on the committee are experts from Quebec City's Laval University.

HALIFAX (CP) — A court battle looms over ownership of an estimated $700,000 worth of 13th-century French coins salvaged from a Cape Breton Island wreck by three scuba divers.

Five Cape Breton men presented a claim in the Nova Scotia Supreme Court here Thursday and obtained an injunction from Mr. Justice L. D. Currie. The injunction would prevent disposal of the huge haul of gold and silver coins until the court deals with the case.

Alex Storm, 29, of Louisbourg, N.S., led the diving trio that found the money last fall in the wreck of a French pay ship off Louisbourg on the east coast of Cape Breton.

The injunction applies to Storm or anyone working for him. The coins now are in safekeeping in Cape Breton Island banks.

The injunction was requested by Ronald Blomund of Dutch Brook, N.S., Willard Dillon and Robert D. MacDonald, both of Black Brook, N.S., Joseph Nearing of Glace Bay, N.S., and Hyman Goldberg of Sydney.

The five claim they received permission from Capt. E. R. Huxford, receiver of wrecks under the Canada Shipping Act, to search for and claim salvage of any goods taken from Le Chateau, a pay and supply ship that sank off the province's northeast coast Aug. 26, 1725, while bringing a year's pay to French soldiers stationed at the Louisbourg garrison on Quebec.

They claim they have been searching for treasure from the wreck for five years and have turned Le Chateau's anchor over to Capt. Huxford as well as placing bouys and markers on the hull.

The injunction, effective until April 28 when the matter will be heard by the provincial Supreme Court, prevents Storm from disposing of any goods removed from the ill-fated French vessel that carried 310 persons to their deaths when it foundered in a fierce Atlantic gale.

Storm, Harvey MacLeod and Dave MacEachern last Monday broke a seven-month secret that they had recovered thousands of French coins after three years of searching.

The Nova Scotia provincial secretary's department is still pondering what share of the money, if any, the government is entitled to under the Treasure Trove Act.

Vancouverite Charged With Wife's Murder

VANCOUVER (CP) — Rene Castellani, 40, was remanded without plea until April 15 when he appeared in court here Thursday charged with capital murder in the arsenic-poisoning of his wife Esther.

Castellani, a former radio promotion man who gave his occupation a construction worker, was arrested shortly before midnight Wednesday by city detectives.

The arrest came more than 10 months after his wife's death and four months after a coroner's jury ruled her death homicide by person or persons unknown. They attributed death to arsenic poisoning while she was a patient in hospital here.

Castellani was remanded in custody but his lawyer, Al Mackoff, said he would make bail application in Supreme Court next week.

Mr. Mackoff asked for a preliminary hearing within three weeks.

Mrs. Castellani was admitted to hospital May 24, 1965 and died July 11.

Her body was later exhumed and on orders of Vancouver coroner Glen McDonald, missing Donna was rushed to Kings County Hospital where she was reported in satisfactory condition after her stomach was pumped.

Child behavior specialists said it might be weeks before it could be determined if the drug had mentally crippled the child.

TWO CHARGES

Franklin, an unemployed printing press operator, told authorities he had bought the LSD-saturated cube from someone on a Greenwich Village street for $5. According to one report, he told police he bought the cube for "an experiment to see what effect the drug has on the human body."

U.S. Sit-In Staged At UN

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—A majority of the United Nations Security Council membership, with U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg in the forefront, staged a sit-in of nearly 6½ hours Thursday night in an effort to have the council president summon an urgent session on Rhodesia.

The 10 nations demanding a meeting of the 15-nation council gave up before midnight. A delegate said they had received "an oral indication" Ambassador Mousa Keta of Mali, council president for April, was continuing his consultations and could not call a meeting before today.

NO CHOICE

Britain had requested an urgent session to obtain authority from the United Nations to use force if necessary to stop ships from delivering oil to the rebel regime in Rhodesia. They wanted the council to meet at 4 p.m. Thursday.

But with the council president still refusing to set a time for the meeting, the waiting delegates had no choice but to go home and hope for word from Keta today.

Goldberg, who became spokesman for the unprecedented sit-in, field reporters in early evening the 10 members "are preparing to meet in the council this evening and are holding themselves ready for this purpose."

EIGHT PLEAD

He said the 10 are the United States, Britain, The Netherlands, New Zealand, Japan, China, Argentina, Uruguay, France and Jordan.

The other council members are the Soviet Union, Mali, Uganda, Nigeria and Bulgaria. Eight of the 10 — excluding France and Jordan — joined in asking Secretary-General U Thant to convey their views formally and urgently to the council president, Ambassador Mousa Keta of Mali.

CONVISED VIEWS

Thant immediately sent their views to Keta by a special representative. Members of the group seeking the council meeting started going into the council chamber at 5 p.m. and remained there through the evening.

Asked if their procedure was unusual, Goldberg replied: "It is a most unusual and unprecedented procedure."

As the delegates waited, Britain put in a formal resolution requesting authority to use force if necessary to prevent ships from arriving in Portuguese Mozambique with oil destined for Rhodesia.

MUSIAN URGINGS

Diplomatic sources said the delay in calling the meeting came about because Keta was seeking approval of the entire 36-nation African group before convening the session, although only Mali, Nigeria and Uganda are African members of the council.

Other diplomatic sources reported that the Soviet Union was continuing to oppose the plan to increase

U.S. Tests N-Device In Desert

NEVADA TEST SITE (UPI)—For the second straight day, the Atomic Energy Commission conducted a low-yield nuclear test underground Thursday at this desert test site.

It was the 13th test since the beginning of the year and the 267th at the test centre.

Low yield means the explosion has a force of less than 20 kilotons, or 20,000 tons of TNT.

Prizes Grow As Artists Storm Fence

By JERRY BOULTREE

It seems Victoria's artists just can't lose.

To borrow the words of one of the city's fence painters: "With spring, and sun and someone else's fence to muck about on — what more could a person ask for?"

CURIOUS, TOO

Thursday saw more artists out at the boardings surrounding the new provincial museum and archives construction site.

Artists and viewers and the just plain curious turned out at Thunderbird Park.

And there was an air of impish caper to the whole thing.

GALLERY

And the net result was a mammoth bill of encouragement to the artists as merchants joined The Daily Colonist in offering awards.

Here are the prizes so far:

The Colonist has offered $100 to the winner of a competition to be judged by Works Minister Chant, Mayor Toome, Prof. Tony Emery of University of Victoria, and Colin Graham, director of the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria.

Second prize will be $25; third prize $10.

Mr. Graham has offered to show the best of the paintings at the gallery following judging on May 21.

Peasey's Drug Store, Simcoe and Mendocino, has offered $100 to a winning artist — with a rider attached.

Shots Kill Four In Indian Riots

CALCUTTA, India (Reuters)—Police opened fire twice and killed four persons Thursday during violent demonstrations in which crowds attacked a police headquarters with home-made bombs.

Fifteen persons were taken to hospitals with bullet wounds and 30 policemen were injured by stone-throwing crowds.

Highways Minister Phil Gaglardi laughingly adds few brush strokes to caricature of himself painted on pa-els which surround Vancouver courthouse lawn.

Riots Step Up

Viet Nam Corps Secedes

SAIGON (UPI)—Anti-government and anti-American mobs went on a rampage in Saigon Friday for the fifth straight day amid reports from Da Nang that the senior officers of the powerful Vietnamese Army First Corps had withdrawn their loyalty from Premier Nguyen Cao Ky's government.

Viet Cong forces meanwhile attacked and apparently overran a 20-man government outpost only 25 miles south of Saigon in the second major encounter with Viet Cong force in the suburbs of the capital within 24 hours.

The senior officers at Da Nang issued a proclamation stating that they had lost confidence in Ky's government. The action raised the spectre of a civil war between opposing South Vietnamese forces over Ky's continuing rule. Some 4,000 Vietnamese marines, rushed to the area earlier this week by Ky, were still at the Da Nang air base.

STILL PONDERING

The proclamation was signed by most of the senior officers of the First Corps command except for Gen. Nguyen Van Chuan, their commander. He was reported still pondering whether to go along with the action that amounted to a virtual revolt against Ky's leadership.

Two Vietnamese air force Skyraiders buzzed Chuan's headquarters, apparently in a show of force by Ky's loyal airmen. Troops at the compound said the planes were spotting for a fight and that the pilots were trying to draw fire.

NO SHOOTING

But no shooting was reported immediately in the strategic major port city in the northeast area of the country.

In Saigon, government paratroopers trying to quell the riots Thursday night fired tear gas grenades into Saigon's main Buddhist shrine.

U.S. Army infantrymen Thursday caught 150 Viet Cong by surprise and killed 24 of them in a battle 20 miles northwest of the capital.

MAN FOUND

An American reported kidnapped during the height of the violence Thursday night has been located, U.S. officials reported. The American, Larry Dewitt, 25, Oakdale, N.Y., was severely beaten by the mob.

As the violence continued, a gang of 30 to 40 youths stormed a jeep in the vicinity of the main Buddhist pagoda in Saigon, pulled a man believed to be an American out of the jeep and killed him.

Space Engines

Success, Then Failure!

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP)—The United States attempted Thursday night to achieve the first double ignition of high-powered hydrogen engines in space—and after 30 minutes of successful operation, something seemed to have gone wrong.

An Atlas-Centaur rocket blasted away from Cape Kennedy right on schedule at 8 p.m. EST and the Centaur upper stage ignited successfully a first time to boost itself into a 100-mile-high orbit.

FIRE AGAIN

After the hydrogen-propelled Centaur coasted through space for 25 minutes, the U.S. Space Agency announced that radio data indicated the stage had fired a second time, had shut down and that a dummy model of a project survivor soft-lander moonship had been hurled toward an imaginary moon 236,000 miles in space.

Court Peace Shaky

VANCOUVER (CP)—Peace has been declared in Vancouver's magistrates' courts but there were reports the war is not yet over.

The city's new senior magistrate, James Bartman, says the dispute between city prosecutor Stewart McMorran and eight of the 10 magistrates is officially over.

But there have been reports that the magistrates are sticking by their earlier decision not to allow Mr. McMorran to appear before them despite Magistrate Bartman's statements to the contrary.

The prosecutor declined to comment Thursday on his future plans.

Mandatory Sanctions Face Smith

By BORIS MISKEW

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—There is a strong possibility the United Nations will enforce mandatory sanctions to help Britain in her drive to bring down the rebel regime of Premier Ian Smith in Rhodesia.

Britain issued an urgent call for an emergency meeting of the 15-nation Security Council Thursday and was assured of United States support in her effort to deal more effectively with the Rhodesian situation.

The call came at a time when a Greek tanker under charter to a South African firm and loaded with oil was anchored off Beira, Portuguese Mozambique's chief port. Both Portugal and South Africa have refused to pay attention to a UN resolution passed earlier urging voluntary sanctions against Rhodesia.

The tanker Joanna V entered the harbor despite a warning from a Royal Navy frigate with the intention of unloading a shipment of 18,000 tons of oil in Mozambique, from where it would be piped into Rhodesia.

Britain's Foreign Secretary Michael Stewart warned South Africa defiance of the voluntary UN oil embargo against the white-minority ruled British breakaway colony could lead to mandatory UN sanctions—with the possibility of the use of force to back them up.

Britain Issues Call

Disastrous Rains Hit South America

By FRANCIS B. MENT

RIO DE JANEIRO (LAT)—Since shortly after the first of the year, uncommonly heavy rains have pounded a vast area of eastern South America, causing uncounted deaths and calculating damage.

Brazil, Argentina, Paraguay and Uruguay all have felt the effects and it will be months before the toll can even be roughly estimated.

Sketchy reports from the devastated area indicate that hundreds are dead and thousands homeless. Property damage is deep into the millions of dollars and losses in crops may not be known for months. Although the figure is expected to be in the hundreds of millions of dollars.

Rainfall alone has accounted for much of the loss in both lives and property. In northern Argentina, the swirling waters were reported to be six feet deep in the streets of some cities.

Just northwest of Buenos Aires, an estimated 200,000 persons were driven from their homes in the towns of San Nicolas, Pergamino and Villa Hermosa. Reports from the area said the flooding was the worst of the century.

At Gambling Club

London Stages Western Gunfight

LONDON (UPI)—Six men appeared in court Thursday accused of triggering a Wild West-style gunfight in a London gambling club that left one man dead and littered the scene with injured.

The battle took place at 3 a.m. March 8 at Mr. Smith's Club and the neighboring street in the district of Canford. Most of the six men who appeared in court charged with making an affray were injured in it. One still had his right arm in a sling.

Prosecutor Oliver Nugent said 15 to 20 men with at least two guns, possibly more, were in the fight between "outwardly friendly" gangs.

The picture which arises from the evidence is rather like what you may have seen in Western films — with two people facing each other and people edging away to get out of the line of fire," Nugent said.

The fight moved into the street, where one injured man was dragged into a car after being carried out of the club.

Another was taken to a garden in an obvious attempt to hide him. Two of his friends hid in another garden, said Nugent. Another injured man was taken to a hospital after amateurish attempts to sew up his wounds.

"The general line of defence is that they were attacked by somebody but they did not know whom," Nugent said.

Hong Kong Rioters Protest Price Hike

HONG KONG (Reuters)—Police opened fire on rioters overturning cars in Hong Kong's Kowloon district early today after a third successive night of disturbances.

At least two rioters were wounded.

Thousands of demonstrators took to the streets, stoning vehicles and starting fires in protest against a plan to increase the cross-harbor ferry fare and against rising prices in general.

One group of demonstrators made a bonfire in the street from chairs, tables and other articles looted from nearby stores.

At 12:30 a.m. the authorities imposed a curfew until 6 a.m. and patrolling British troops and riot police arrested curfew breakers.

Ancient Christian Story Relived This Weekend

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

As Canadians make their annual exodus in search of spring, the ancient Christian story of death in agony and rebirth in joy will be commemorated across the nation this weekend.

Easter, 1966, takes on a particular significance for Christians and other people of goodwill. Jews will be continuing their observation of the Passover in remembrance of their forebears' freedom from slavery. Their eight-day celebration began Monday.

Christians of both Eastern and Western churches will commemorate Christ's death on the cross or Calvary and His resurrection on the third day.

With Eastern churches marking the date by the Julian calendar and Western churches by the Gregorian calendar, their Easter observances coincide every fifth year.

A grim prediction that 40 persons will die on the highways during the 78-hour holiday was made Thursday by the Canadian Highway Safety Council. Its figures are calculated from 6 p.m. local time Thursday to midnight Sunday. Last year 39 persons died on the roads and during the last five years the average Easter highway death toll has been 38.

Centres across Canada reported transportation systems setting themselves for a massive rush with travel bookings heavy. Indications are that it will be an otherwise quiet weekend with few special activities.

Construction begins Easter Sunday on the Christian pavilion for Expo 67 in Montreal.

Youngsters of the Cowichan band make friends with a team of heavy draft horses at the Lines at Genoa Bay. Offering his hand is Kevin

A Day to Remember For Littlest of Band

DUNCAN—The littlest members of the Cowichan Indian band romped over the Genoa Bay farm of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lines Thursday and they probably will never forget it.

Brilliant sunshine reflected in their eyes and with interest they watched a team of workhorses leave the barnyard for work in the field.

Nat far away the straight wall of Mount Troubadour dipped its rugged top into the blue sky.

It was the first time since the Cowichan Indian band's nursery school was established in February that the youngsters for one morning left their room at the Cowichan Indian band recreation hall for an organized outing.

Together with their nursery supervisor Mrs. June Lister and some of the mothers they discovered many things on the farm. But the highlights were the big horses, a cow with her twin calves under shady trees, the sweeping green land framed by forests and finally the beautiful hunchback with Mrs. Lines as hostess.

With folded hands they spoke their thanks at the table and with beaming faces they departed in a small bus and cars to return to their homes.

Relationship 'Stupid'

Trade Link Urged With Red China

NANAIMO—Canada should exchange trade representatives immediately with Red China, Dr. Hugh Keenleyside said Thursday.

"I think we are being very stupid about our relationship with China," he said.

Dr. Keenleyside, co-chairman of B.C. Hydro, was speaking to a crowd of 200 at a meeting sponsored by the Nanaimo branch of the World Federalists of Canada.

LIKE REVIVAL

He said there was almost a kind of religious revival taking place in China.

It's quite safe to leave things lying around because there was little danger of anybody stealing your personal belongings, he said.

"They could give axes to the Puritans and still win the game."

ABLE TO COMPARE

Dr. Keenleyside and his wife spent two weeks last fall in China and were able to compare conditions with those during their last visit prior to the Second World War.

"The most striking change is the cleanliness of the cities. In old times Chinese cities were the filthiest in the world. Now no city in North America is as clean."

Poverty had been reduced too, he said.

"You don't see children obviously suffering malnutrition."

There was no longer any exploitation of sex.

"In the past, prostitution was not only common but rampant," he said. "It was worse than Piccadilly at night."

As further examples of the "revival" he said rickshaws were now in museums as examples of former "exploitation."

A huge race track outside Shanghai is now a canal surrounding a park and the grandstand houses welfare offices.

Integers Intrigue Library Crowd

UNION BAY—Patrons of the library this week have been interested in a novel display.

The slogan "We've got your number" refers to the Dewey decimal system of classification. Maple leaf cutouts scattered across walls and windows each show a subject and its Dewey decimal number.

It was a young American librarian, Melvill Dewey, who brought about this revolutionary change in library classification of non-fiction material.

Dewey graduated from Amherst College, Amherst, Mass.

In 1874 at 23 years of age and stayed on there as acting librarian.

He was appalled by the confusion. Always an enthusiastic reformer, he soon began to work on a system to bring order out of chaos.

After studying the classifications of knowledge already available to him, Dewey decided to use a scheme of arranging books by subject matter. This was a radical departure from the almost universal practice of arranging books alphabetically by the author's name, or by size, accession or even color.

He first worked out a theory that all human knowledge could be divided into ten groups.

Each of these 10 main classes was broken up into 10 more specialized fields.

Ferry Crews' Lawyer Asks Rain Check

Three Do Not a Cabinet Make

A lawyer representing disgruntled B.C. ferry crews has been invited to appear before a cabinet sub-committee, but she'll take a rain check.

Marney Stevenson, who heard about the meeting set for Tuesday long after word had been released to the press, represents catering and deck crews who have no union.

The crews staged a brief work stoppage New Year's Day in protest of 1966 work schedules. Mrs. Stevenson took their case to the Civil Service Commission without satisfaction.

Her later appeals for a board of reference have been rejected by the cabinet which alone has the power to set up the board.

The meeting scheduled for Tuesday is with Provincial Secretary Wesbe Black, Lands and Forests Minister Ray Williston and Works Minister W. N. Cham.

It was announced by Mr. Black Thursday.

A representative of Mrs. Stevenson's law firm will attend to ask for an adjournment.

Mrs. Stevenson said the sub-committee meeting is a ploy by the cabinet to circumvent setting up the board of reference.

"If we accepted the meeting, the cabinet could say that's the end of the issue and we would never get a board of reference," she said.

Ladysmith Student Wins Trip

CHEMUNUS—Wally Eamer of Ladysmith secondary school won a trip to Ottawa as first prize in a public speaking contest sponsored by the Rotary Club.

Other contestants were Sylvia Gilmore, Marile Kay, Veronica Dobell, Rod Bell and Ted Zemek. Judges were W.H. Dolson, Ernie Paulding and Harold Whitfield of the Duncan Rotary Club.

Patio or Driveway weeds?

FIGHT BACK WITH ORTHO!

TRIOX kills ugly weeds on driveways, patios, walks!

Without bending... without stooping... without digging, you can get rid of every single weed that's marring your patio, your driveway, your walks, curbs or gutters. All you do is dilute and sprinkle TRIOX. It's as simple as that.

TRIOX does more than just wipe out established weeds. It prevents new growth for as long as two full years. Seeds wither and die before they can get started again, so you can forget about the work of old-fashioned weeding for a long, long time.

A word of caution. Since TRIOX application kills all vegetation, you don't want to use it on lawns or cultivated areas. For lawn weeds, use ORTHO WEED-B-GON.

Whatever your weed problem, ORTHO can have it licked this very weekend. See your garden supplier today!

Parents Blocking Employment Aid

DUNCAN — Despite a labor shortage at hotels, motels and restaurants, many parents continue to block their daughters from accepting work as kitchen helpers, waitresses and dayworkers, says R. S. Robinson, manager of the Duncan national employment office.

Placements of women undergraduates presents a serious problem in this area because opportunities for employment are poor.

Mr. Robinson said many enquiries for women undergraduates have been received and employers should contact NES immediately if they can assist.

Some young women may be unable to return to university next fall without the full co-with 480 men and 149 women a month ago.

Mr. Robinson said dairy farm hands are still in short supply.

TURNOVER WORRY

The high turnover of unskilled labor at mills is of "deep concern" to operators, MHI wrights, painters, welders and electricians continue to be in short supply, he said.

A very slight surplus of carpenters exists now but several new projects scheduled will create a shortage of them.

Contracts are expected to be awarded in May for the $2,000,000 expansion of Ocean Cement at Nanaimo and the $20,000,000 addition to the newsprint mill of B.C. Forest Products at Crofton.

Mr. Robinson also said he is pleased to see the Sheltered Workshop in operation at Duncan.

"This workshop is providing employment for people who are unable to compete in the normal employment market."

"This workshop is filling a great community need."

WORKSHOPS HELP

He said career workshops for students are becoming increasingly successful.

A recent workshop at Lake Cowichan High School gave students an opportunity to discuss careers with highly-qualified counselors. Another workshop is scheduled at Chemainus High School April 22, for Chemainus, Ladysmith and Ganges students.

Chemainus Wants Arena

CHEMAINUS — The Ratepayers and Citizens Association will ask North Cowichan council to pave the way for construction of an ice arena at Fuller's Lake Park.

In a letter to be delivered to the council, the association asks that a bylaw be prepared and submitted to vote in the northern part of the municipality — Chemainus, Crofton and possibly Westholme.

Sanderson Funeral Saturday

DUNCAN — One-time Chamber of Commerce president Robert Sanderson died suddenly Tuesday. He was 83.

Born in Lancashire, England, he came to Victoria in 1904. In 1924 he founded the Duncan Iron Works.

He is survived by one son, George and a daughter, Mrs. Harvey Lowe.

Funeral services will be held 2 p.m. Saturday in Duncan United Church.

Indians To Meet

DUNCAN — About 150 delegates from B.C. and other women from Alberta, Whitehorse and Tacoma are expected at the All-Indian Conference for Homemakers at Duncan next week.

The event is sponsored by the Cowichan Indian Homemakers' Club.

The mothers will discuss their problems without white guest speakers or lecturers.

One of the many highlights will be a dinner at the Tzouhalem Hotel Wednesday.

Unity Still Main Hope

New Recreation Bylaw For North Cowichan?

NORTH COWICHAN — North Cowichan Recreation Commission chairman Dennis Hogan told his commission Thursday he hopes before the end of this year a new recreation bylaw can be presented to the whole municipality.

He expressed hope that a similar vote could be held in the city of Duncan at the same time.

Disappointed commissioners from the northern section of North Cowichan finally agreed to wait four weeks, as was council Wednesday, before action will be taken on a letter from Chemainus ratepayers.

VOTE REQUESTED

In the letter the ratepayers asked council to put a Fuller's Lake arena vote before taxpayers in the north as soon as possible. COUN. Hogan said it is hoped within four weeks it can be established what type of recreational facilities people in the south desire and then a site could be chosen.

Commissioner Al Dines asked: "Will the city of Duncan share at all?" COUN. Hogan replied, "Yes, there is hope that they (the city council) will accept the recommendation from their recreation commission."

Once more discussing the defeat last month by the southern area of a $700,000 composite recreation bylaw, the commissioner Baden Millard of

Chemainus said, "In my opinion we have never been able to get anything from the south and if we don't do something now we might as well forget about it."

Commissioner Norman Bevan wanted to know, in case two recreational areas were established in North Cowichan, and the Fuller's Lake arena were built but could not pay its way, would the people in the south have to subsidize it?"

COUN. Hogan said only the people in the north would be liable for any loss of their arena.

Commissioner Stan Baker, also from Chemainus, stressed that, if the south and the city of Duncan are sincere in their wishes, "then they have to indicate to us within one month that they are going with us and it has to be unqualified."

Commissioner Dines of Chemainus asked: "How can you expect an answer from the city of Duncan in one month?"

COUN. Gerry Smith added: "If the south doesn't come up with a suggestion I want the wholehearted support of the commission for this arena at Fuller's Lake."

Weldwood Hints Chemical Plant For Union Bay

UNION BAY — Weldwood of Canada is considering building a chemical plant here.

The information was contained in a letter from Weldwood president John Benes to J. Ken Williams, secretary-treasurer of the community club. Mr. Benes' letter was in reply to one written by Mr. Williams, requesting help building a marina.

"We are discussing the possible establishment of a chemical plant at the Union Bay site," wrote Mr. Benes, "which would receive its raw material by tanker, and until these discussions are completed, we would not want to discuss alternate uses of the bay which would interfere with access by deep-sea ships."

"The consultants who have advised us on the use of some of our real estate have pointed out that our holdings in the Union Bay area might lend themselves to major recreational use. With this in mind, we are approaching developers interested in such projects, and would welcome it if you would direct any party interested in such major developments in the Union Bay area to us."

30 Will Race In Cycle Meet

NANAIMO — More than 30 competitors are expected to assemble at Terminal Park shopping centre May 7 for the start of a 32-mile bicycle road race.

James Kelly, vice-president of the Nanaimo branch of the Navy League, said he is hoping the race will be staged annually.

"It will be raced under the sanction of the Canadian Wheelman's Association," he said, and Nanaimo merchants will be providing trophies for the competitors who will be drawn from throughout the Pacific Northwest."

NAVY WEEK

He said the race is being arranged by well-known Nanaimo cyclist, Hank Wouters, who is also donating a trophy for the winner.

The course will take the competitors out to Lantzville and back to Caledonia Park.

The race is only one of many events being staged by the branch to celebrate Navy Week in the city.

Other attractions include a parade and soccer game.

On the day of the race traffic will be controlled by the RCMP.

Woman Heads Post Office

UNION BAY — Leroy Richardson has resigned as postmaster after three and one-half years on the job.

Mrs. Norma Laakovich was appointed postmistress April 1.

Mr. and Mrs. Laakovich came here in 1958. She was postmistress at Cassidy for six years.

This is only the fourth postmaster here in 53 years. Fred Brown was the first, in 1913.

His daughter, Mrs. Paul Grundy, was postmistress from 1934 to 1937, and Leroy Richardson was appointed following her resignation.

'Appalling' Record

Youth Sent Back to Jail After 19th Traffic Charge

COURTENAY — Robert Hummel, 17, was remanded in custody to April 12 after being found guilty of fraudulently obtaining food and lodging.

Court was told the accused wrote a cheque for $31.79 March 11 when he had no bank account.

March 11 he opened an account in Victoria with a deposit of $32 but immediately made withdrawals.

A pre-sentence report will be obtained before sentence is passed.

Walter Lloyd Nelson, 19, of Ladysmith, will spend the next 13 months in jail with a possibility of an additional term of 12 months indefinite.

He was convicted after a high-speed chase by police April 2 in a stolen car at Royston. During the chase the accused damaged both the stolen car and a police vehicle, court was told.

He was given nine months definite and 12 months indefinite, for theft, three months consecutive for dangerous driving and a fine of $50 or an additional consecutive term of 30 days for driving while suspended.

He was also prohibited from driving for a further 12 months.

"Your record is appalling," Magistrate John Ryland said.

These are your 17th, 18th and 19th charges and you have already been to prison."

The court noted the youth had only a Grade 6 education.

He said staff will be available for extra help after school every day for the rest of the month after Easter holidays.

Teachers Help Students Recover from Flu

"We want parents to know this special tutoring is readily available," Mr. Crelling said, and he has sent letters to all parents.

He appealed to parents to make the most of this opportunity if they felt their children needed extra help in any subject.

"Help will most certainly be given if it is sought, but the responsibility for seeking the extra work will lie with the student."

In some cases additional work is being assigned for completion during the Easter holidays.

This will not be done on a school-wide basis, Mr. Crelling said, because "some students recovering from influenza will get more benefit from a real holiday than from more home work."

Woodlands was closed for several days last week due to the flu epidemic.

Close to Danger

Somewhere on a road on Vancouver Island, which shall remain nameless, Easter lilies are pushing through the soil only inches from the tire tracks of the traffic. Thousands of Island residents will be out this holiday weekend for glimpses of spring wildflowers. — (Agnes M. Flett)

School Policies Flayed

Violent Trustee Protest Urged

CAMPBELL RIVER — Trustee Dr. John Ross has urged the school board to resign as a body in "violent protest" over provincial government school construction policies.

The government's 37-to-1 pupil-teacher ratio is "ridiculous," he said.

"It's time we made a protest that will be heard in Victoria."

Secretary P. T. Sampson said 15 or 20 classrooms would be needed to close the gap between the government's figure and 25-to-1 advocated by the board.

Part of the problem is that the government will not approve school population estimates more than two years in advance, he said.

They say they need a five-year study to judge classroom requirements.

"We're at least a year behind in classroom space right now," said Dr. Ross. "In 1967 we will be building for 1968."

"We'll never catch up at this rate."

He reminded board members they voted last year to resign in a body to protest the government's refusal to allow a non-shareable referendum for classroom construction.

The board voted to take over the Artibus school for retarded children July 1. The school has 10 pupils, two full-time and four voluntary teachers.

Building Behind Needs
